Basis for Variability of Response to Anti-rheumatic Drugs Peter M. Brooks, 1988 National Library of Medicine Current Catalog National Library of Medicine (U.S.), Current Catalog National Library of Medicine (U.S.), First multi year cumulation covers six years 1965-70 Clinical Pharmacy (2nd Edition) Jeffery Hughes, 2001-12-15 Clinical pharmacy a practical approach Non-steroidal Anti-Inflammatory Drugs Basis for Variability in Response Peter M. Brooks, Richard O. Day, 1985 Non steroidal anti inflammatory drugs NSAIDs are one of the most commonly prescribed groups of drugs in the community This reflects the high frequency of rheumatic complaints but may in part be due to the relative non efficacy of these drugs Since the introduction of ibuprofen the first new NSAID to compete with aspirin phenylbutazone and indomethacin there has been a proliferation of new NSAIDs of differing chemical classes but an apparent similar spectrum of action Despite the fact that these drugs are thought to work by an apparent common mechanism of action suppression of prostaglandin synthetase activity continued development of these drugs occurs There exists at present a conflict between the pharmaceutical industry with its attempts to introduce new NSAIDs and drug regulatory authorities who are generally not convinced of the need for additional drugs of this class The practising clinician regards a variety of NSAIDs as necessary to enable pain relief to be optimised with minimal adverse effects With respect to the dilemma of how many NSAIDs are really necessary surprisingly little convincing data is available to assist in resolving this issue It was therefore decided to hold a satellite meeting to the XVIth International League Against Rheumatism Conference in May 1985 Cumulated Index Medicus, 1974 Revue roumaine de biochimie, 1996 Bibliographic Guide to Conference Publications New York Public Library. Research Libraries, 1989 Vols for 1975 include publications cataloged by the Research Libraries of the New York Public Library with additional entries from the Library of Congress MARC tapes Basis for Variability of Response to Anti-Rheumatic Drugs P. Brooks, 1988-10-01 Since the rheumatic diseases are among the most prevalent of conditions the anti rheumatic drugs make up one of the largest groups of drugs prescribed They vary from the non steroidal anti inflammatory drugs through to the complex immunomodulators There are significant differences between these groups of drugs as regards their mechanism of action and within each spectrum of adverse reactions yet there is also some overlap class there are also subtle individual differences between the drugs despite a sharing of the basic mechanisms of action and range of side effects It is this individual variation and in particular the individual reaction of the patient to the drug that we attempted to address at this symposium The first symposium on Individual Variation in Response to Non Steroidal Anti inflammatory Drugs was held at Leura New South Wales Australia as a satellite symposium to the XVI International Congress of Rheumatology in August 1985 Following a successful meeting proceedings of which were published in a supplement to Agents and Actions Suppl 17 1986 it was decided to organise a second symposium as a satellite meeting of the International Congress of Pharmacology Meeting in Sydney August 1987 The meeting was held at the Manly Pacific and focused on variability in response to anti rheumatic drugs in general rather than just concentrating on the non steroidal drugs 日本
