Conservation Of Exploited Species:

Conservation of Exploited Species John D. Reynolds, Georgina M. Mace, Kent H. Redford, John G. Robinson, 2001-10-18
This book brings together international experts to examine interactions between the biology of wildlife and the divergent goals of people involved in hunting fishing gathering and culling wildlife Reviews of theory show how sustainable exploitation is tied to the study of population dynamics with direct links to reproductive rates life histories behavior and ecology As such theory is rarely put into practice to achieve sustainable use and effective conservation Conservation of Exploited Species explores the many reasons for this failure and considers remedies to tackle them

The Use of CITES for Commercially-exploited Fish Species Solène Guggisberg, 2015-12-11 This book examines the legality adequacy and efficacy of using the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora CITES for commercially exploited fish species and assesses whether the existing institutional cooperation with the Food and Agriculture Organization FAO and regional fisheries management organizations RFMOs is efficient This case study also provides an interesting lens to approaching wider international law issues Indeed finding ways to achieve effective governance of transboundary or global natural resources is central to the peaceful use of oceans and land Furthermore the role of science in advising decision makers is a sensitive issue which deserves scrutiny and is similar in many regimes Finally the complex problem of fragmentation of international law is acute in various fields of environmental law as in all rapidly developing areas of international regulations

The Regime for the Exploitation of Transboundary Marine Fisheries Resources Ellen Hey, 2024-08-26
Conserving Africa's Mega-Diversity in the Anthropocene Joris P. G. M. Cromsigt, Sally Archibald, Norman Owen-Smith, 2017-03-02 This book synthesises key insights from a century of ecological research and monitoring efforts in one of Africa's oldest protected areas understanding of fish biology and fisheries and will serve as valuable references for undergraduates and graduates looking for a comprehensive source on a wide variety of topics in fisheries science. They will also be useful to researchers who need up to date reviews of topics that impinge on their fields and decision makers who need to appreciate the scientific background for management and conservation of aquatic ecosystems. Provides a unique overview of the study of fish biology and ecology and the assessment and management of fish populations and ecosystems. The first volume concentrates on aspects of fish biology and ecology both at the individual and population levels whilst the second volume addresses the assessment and management of fish populations and ecosystems. Written by an international team of expert scientists and practitioners. The Exploitation of Mammal Populations V.J. Taylor, N. Dunstone, 2012-12-06. Human exploitation of other mammals has passed through three historical phases distinct in their ecological significance though overlapping in time. Initially Homo sapiens was a predator particularly of herbivores but also of fur bearing predators. From about 11 000 years ago goats and sheep were domesticated in the Middle East rapidly replacing gazelles and other game as the principal source of meat. The principal crops including wheat and barley were taken into agriculture at about the same time and the resulting Neolithic farming culture spread slowly from there over the subsequent 10 500 years. In a few places such as Mexico, Peru and China this Middle Eastern culture met and merged with agricultural traditions that had made a similar but independent transition. These agricultural traditions provided the essential support for the industrial revolution and for a third phase of industrial exploitation of mammals. In this chapter these themes are drawn out and their ecological significance is investigated. Some of the impacts of humans on other mammals require consideration on a world wide basis but the chapter concentrates parochially on Great Britain. What have been the ecological consequences of our exploitation of other mammals?

2.2 HISTORICAL PHASES OF EXPLOITATION
2.2.1 Predatory man. Our nearest relatives chimpanzees, orang utans and gorillas are essentially forest species deriving most of their diet from the fruits of forest trees and the shoots and leaves of plants.

Reptile Biodiversity Roy W. McDiarmid, 2012-01-10. Authoritative and comprehensive provides an up to date description of the tool box of methods for inventorying and monitoring the diverse spectrum of reptiles. All biodiversity scientists will want to have it during project planning and as study progresses. A must for field biologists, conservation planners and biodiversity managers. Jay M. Savage, San Diego State University. Kudos to the editors and contributors to this book. From the perspective of a non ecologist such as myself who only occasionally needs to intensively sample a particular site or habitat the quality and clarity of this book has been well worth the wait. Patterns and Processes of Speciation in Ancient Lakes Thomas Wilke, Risto Väinölä, Frank Riedel, 2009-04-02. Ancient lakes are exceptional freshwater environments that have continued to exist for hundreds of thousands of years. They have long been recognized as centres of biodiversity and hotspots of evolution. During recent decades speciation in ancient lakes has emerged as an important and exciting topic in evolutionary biology. The contributions in this volume deal with patterns and processes of biological diversification in three prominent ancient lake systems. Of these the famous East African Great Lakes already have a strong tradition of evolutionary studies but the two other systems have so far received much less attention. The exceptional biodiversity of the European sister lakes Ohrid and Prespa of the Balkans has long been known but has largely been neglected in the international literature until recently. The rich biota and problems of its evolution in the two central lake systems on the Indonesian island of Sulawesi in turn have only lately started to draw scientific attention. This volume aims at deepening the awareness of the unusual biological diversity in ancient lakes in general and of the role of these lakes as natural laboratories for the study of speciation and diversification in particular. It should stimulate further research that will lead to a better understanding of key evolutionary processes in these lakes and to knowledge that might help in mitigating the deterioration of their diversity in the future.

Handbook of Fish Biology and Fisheries Paul J. B. Hart, John D. Reynolds, 2008-04-15

Recent decades have witnessed strong declines in fish stocks around the globe amid growing concerns about the impact of fisheries on marine and freshwater biodiversity. Fisheries biologists and managers are therefore increasingly asking about aspects of ecology, behaviour, evolution and biodiversity that were traditionally studied by people working in very separate fields. This has highlighted the need to work more closely together in order to help ensure future success both in management and conservation. The Handbook of Fish Biology and Fisheries has been written by an international team of scientists and practitioners to provide an overview of the biology of freshwater and marine fish species together with the science that supports fisheries management and conservation. This volume subtitled Fish Biology reviews a broad variety of topics from evolutionary relationships and global biogeography to physiology, recruitment, life histories, genetics, foraging behaviour, reproductive behaviour and community ecology. The second volume subtitled Fisheries uses much of this information in a wide ranging review of fisheries biology including methods of capture, marketing, economics, stock assessment, forecasting, ecosystem impacts and conservation. Together these books present the state of the art in our understanding of fish biology and fisheries and will serve as valuable references for undergraduates and graduates looking for a comprehensive source on a wide variety of topics in fisheries science. They will also be useful to researchers who need up to date reviews of topics that impinge on their fields and decision makers who need to appreciate the scientific background for management and conservation of aquatic ecosystems. To order volume I go to the box in the top right hand corner. Alternatively to order volume II go to <http://www.blackwellpublishing.com/book.asp/ref/063206482X> or to order the 2 volume set go to <http://www.blackwellpublishing.com/book.asp/ref/0632064838>. Provides a unique overview of the study of fish biology and ecology and the assessment and management of fish populations and ecosystems. The first volume concentrates on aspects of fish biology and ecology both at the individual and population levels whilst the second volume addresses the assessment and management of fish populations and ecosystems. Routledge Handbook of Forest Ecology Kelvin S.-H. Peh, Richard T. Corlett, Yves Bergeron, 2024-10-07. The Routledge Handbook of Forest Ecology is an essential resource covering all aspects of forest ecology from a global perspective. This new edition has been fully revised and updated throughout to reflect the profound and unprecedented changes in both forests and climates since the publication of the first edition in 2015. The handbook reflects key developments in the field of forest dynamics and large scale processes as well as the changes that are now manifesting in different types of forests across the globe as a result of climate change. It covers both natural and managed forests from boreal temperate sub tropical and tropical regions of the world. In this second edition the breadth of the handbook has been expanded with new chapters on mountain forests monodominance pathogens and invertebrate pests and amphibians and reptiles in forest ecosystems. Original author teams are complemented by the addition of new authors to offer fresh perspectives and the second edition places greater emphasis on the applicability of each topic at a global level. The handbook is divided into seven parts: Part I The forest, Part II Forest dynamics, Part III Forest flora and fauna, Part IV Energy and nutrients, Part V Forest conservation and management, Part VI Forest and climate change, Part VII Human ecology. The Routledge Handbook of Forest Ecology is an essential reference text for a wide range of students and scholars of ecology, environmental science, forestry, geography and natural resource management.

Bioeconomic Modelling and Valuation of Exploited Marine Ecosystems J.C.J.M. van den Bergh, J. Hoekstra, R. Imeson, P.A.L.D. Nunes, A.T. de Blaeij, 2006-06-19. Economic dimensions have been somewhat neglected in research on nature policy and management of marine ecosystem exploitation. The current book aims to fill this gap. It examines the mismatches of natural socio economic and regulatory processes and regimes in time and space. This involves dealing with the complexity and uncertainty that are inherent to the interaction of marine ecosystems and economic systems. The approach adopted is based on the idea that the design of sustainability policies requires an integration of insights from resource, environmental and ecological economics on the one hand and marine biology and environmental sciences on the other hand. For this purpose use is made of integrated assessment on the basis of theoretical and applied mathematical models. The book is the result of a large project hosted by the Department of Spatial Economics of the Free University in Amsterdam under the supervision of the first author. The project received funding from the Netherlands Organisation for Scientific Research (NWO) through a priority program titled Sustainable Use and Conservation of Marine Living Resources which was initiated and coordinated by Prof. Wim Wolff of the University of Groningen. The work reported here has greatly benefited from external advice given by marine biologists who participated in this research program.
