Watson, Henri Acselrad, 2006-10-19 Dialogues in Urban and Regional Planning offers a new selection of the best urban planning scholarship from each of the world's planning school associations. The award-winning papers presented illustrate the concerns and the discourse of planning scholarship communities and provide a glimpse into planning theory and practice by planning academics around the world. This book is published in association with the Global Planning Education Association Network GPEAN and the nine planning school associations it represents who have selected these papers based on regional competitions.

Change and Continuity in Spatial Planning Vanessa Watson, 2003-12-16 Change and Continuity in Spatial Planning addresses a question of enduring interest to planners: can planning really bring about significant and positive change? In South Africa the process of political transition appeared to create the preconditions for planners to demonstrate how their traditional humanitarian and environmental concerns could find concrete expression in the reshaping of the built environment. Integral to this story is how planning practices have been shaped by the past in a rapidly changing context characterised by a globalising economy, new systems of governance, a changing political ideology and a culture of intensifying poverty and diversity. More broadly the book addresses the issue of how planners use power in situations which themselves represent networks of power relations where both planners and those they engage with operate through frames of reference fundamentally shaped by place and history.

The Routledge Handbook of Planning Research Methods Elisabete A. Silva, Patsy Healey, Neil Harris, Pieter Van den Broeck, 2014-08-21 The Routledge Handbook of Planning Research Methods is an expansive look at the traditions, methods and challenges of research design and research projects in contemporary urban planning. Through case studies, an international group of researchers, planning practitioners and planning academics and educators, all recognized authorities in the field, provide accounts of designing and implementing research projects from different approaches and venues. This book shows how to apply quantitative and qualitative methods to projects and how to take your research from the classroom to the real world. The book is structured into sections focusing on: Beginning planning research; Research design and development; Rediscovering qualitative methods; New advances in quantitative methods; Turning research into action. With chapters written by leading scholars in spatial planning, The Routledge Handbook of Planning Research Methods is the most authoritative and comprehensive handbook on the topic, providing both established and ground-breaking coverage of spatial planning research methods. The book is an invaluable resource for undergraduate and graduate level students, young professionals and practitioners in urban, regional and spatial planning.

Planning in the Face of Crisis Rachelle Alterman, 2005-07-08 Critics of urban and regional planning argue that it is best suited to manage incremental change. Can a planner's skills and expertise be effective in handling a major crisis and large-scale change? The mass immigration from the former Soviet Union to Israel in the 1990s offers the opportunity to study one of the largest-scale non-disaster crisis situations in a democratic, advanced economy country. This book recounts the fascinating saga of how policymakers and planners at both the national and local levels responded to the formidable demand for housing and massive urban growth Planners forged new housing and land use policies and applied a streamlined but controversial planning law The outputs were impressive The outcomes and impacts changed the landscape and human scape of Israel heightening dilemmas of land use and urban policy in this high density country A City Reframed Barbara Czarniawska,2014-02-25 Management of big cities is a relatively unresearched area as compared to city planning and city governance A study of Warsaw city management reveals the transformation process typically found in European countries in political and economic transition In A City Reframed Czarniawska conceptualises city management as an action net under transformation where three types of action are in focus muddling through or coping with daily problems reframing or changing the frame of interpretation of the world in order to take successful action and anchoring the testing of new ideas on potentially involved parties in order to secure cooperation or minimize resistance Muddling through is central to management in Warsaw as it no doubt has always been it is this muddling through that makes cities function The specificity of the Warsaw picture is its demand for reframing and numerous and varied attempts have been made to achieve a change of frame They were sometimes successful sometimes not the skill of anchoring only slowly emerging from the most recent past with the sediments of the old regimes an obvious obstacle The study pinpoints the phenomena central to the construction of the action net of city management and traces its further connections or lack of such both temporally and spatially

Thinking Planning and Urbanism Beth Moore Milroy,2010-01-01 When manufacturers and retailers vacate traditional locations they leave holes in a city s fabric that signal a shifting urban industrial terrain Who should mend these spaces and how should they approach the problem Using Toronto s Dundas Square and surrounding area as a case study Thinking Planning and Urbanism meticulously reconstructs the redevelopment process to explore the theories and practices used It traces the labyrinth of competing interests that can sideline and nearly overwhelm the public planning function In these circumstances Moore Milroy concludes practising planners are marooned by planning theories that begin from the premise that urban space is a social construction and only secondarily a function of technology and aesthetics This book makes plain the nature of the gap between the practice of planning and its theories a gap that inhibits planners from effectively championing creative actions to deal with postindustrial problems The findings drawn from this case will be widely recognized in redevelopment elsewhere and thus will be extremely useful to students and practitioners of urban design public administration municipal law and urban and regional planning Exploring the Urban Community Richard P. Greene,James B. Pick,2006 For courses in Urban Geography and Urban Planning This book covers all the important traditional urban geography topics such as urban spatial structure central place theory neighborhood change and industrial locations analysis and also expands upon these to include contemporary topics such as global cities gender activism technology postmodernism trans nationalism sexuality and environmental justice In addition to broad and very current coverage this contemporary well written treatment of urban geography features strong integration of GIS technologies and thus gives instructors the option to utilize geographic information systems in their teaching The integration of GIS benefits students by its use as an analytic tool to understand urban phenomenon and by its importance as a skill for future jobs The GIS coverage provides a valuable tool for professors to use to teach and engage students in active learning Planning,1998 Harvard Design Magazine ,2000 Planning in a Global Era Andy Thornley,2017-03-02 Globalization was the buzzword of the last decade Advances in communication technology computing and air travel have all contributed to the establishment of what has been referred to as a network society that encompasses the globe Such arguments clearly have a significance on planning an activity which has been concerned with controlling and shaping the use of space This volume brings together contributions from across the world in order to address some of the questions that arise from such global changes The opening section addresses the globalization debate directly raising some theoretical issues and exploring the planning implications across a range of world cities This is followed by an exploration of the way the theoretical debate about planning may need to advance to encompass contemporary forces A number of more specific accounts addressing the need for adaptation are offered The final section focuses on two aspects housing and sustainability which persist as wicked problems and are likely to remain at the top of the agenda in the third millennium Infrastructure Provision and the Negotiating Process Frank Ennis,2017-03-02 The provision of infrastructure for urban developments is increasingly becoming a highly contentious and important issue in planning negotiations By drawing together a range of case studies from North America Australia and Europe this book compares how a number of planning systems deal with this issue There is a general trend by planning agencies towards the securing of infrastructure from the private sector This necessitates a negotiation process between planning agencies developers and infrastructure providers and this volume shows how this process varies according to the political context the nature of the planning system and the existence of other frameworks such as Environmental Impact Assessment By doing so the collection presents an original perspective on both the negotiation process in planning and on how infrastructure should be provided Post-Suburban Europe Nicholas A. Phelps,N. Parsons,Dimitris Ballas,Andrew Dowling,2006-07-28 The term edge city describes the rapid growth of urban centres at the edge of established cities Widely discussed in the US very little has been written about European edge cities This book gives a comparative analysis of examples in Greece Spain Paris Finland and the UK with a theoretical analysis of edge cities and post suburban Europe Millennium Conference Planning History Study Group (South Africa). Millennium Conference,2000 Environment & Planning A. ,1999-07 Environment & Planning ,1999 Environment and Planning ,1999
