Seignious,1999 Construction equipment may constitute one of the single largest long term capital investments for a contractor This is particularly true for those contractors engaged primarily in horizontal construction. Regardless of the type of construction, the goal of successful construction management is to complete projects in accordance with plans and specifications on time, within budget, and at the least possible cost. A crucial element in accomplishing the aforementioned goal is the effective management and implementation of construction equipment. The fundamental goal of the equipment management process is to determine the best piece of equipment for a given job. Although this is not necessarily a complex notion, there are many factors to consider in making this determination. Most importantly, the equipment must pay for itself. In other words, the cost to own and operate the equipment must be less than what the equipment owner charges for its use. Today, there exist many different types of equipment that can accomplish the same job. Thus, the equipment manager must typically consider more than one option. What this report sets forth to provide is a clear and concise handbook for the equipment management process. It provides a basic overview of the subject and will allow the reader to develop a construction equipment management process based on his or her own set of criteria.

Presenting quick engineering know-how for the performance and satisfactory completion of construction using commonly recognized equipment, it deals with the physical concepts of the work, the surrounding conditions, and equipment requirements with an emphasis on controls governing the equipment's performance.

Fleet Management and Selection Systems for Highway Maintenance Equipment David H. Fluharty, 2000. This synthesis report will be of interest to Department of Transportation (DOT) administrators, supervisors, equipment, and Management Information System (MIS) Information Technology (IT) managers and staff, as well as to the engineering and MIS/IT consultants that work for them. It reviews that state of the practice, updating an earlier effort, NCHRP Synthesis 52, Maintenance and Selection Systems for Highway Maintenance Equipment. The synthesis addresses highway fleet maintenance issues in management, equipment staffing, and technology. It describes the trend toward more sophisticated and complex MISs and reports on DOT efforts to develop more systematic approaches to measure equipment effectiveness and to incorporate this quantitative technology successfully into daily operations. This TRB report profiles specific state agency experience in hiring and retaining mechanics.
