Understanding Consumer Choice G. Foxall, 2005-03-11 Understanding Consumer Choice shows how attempts to relate consumers attitudes and actions have implicitly incorporated measures of the very variables at the heart of a situational theory of consumer choice These are the buyer s consumption history and the physical and social setting in which consumer behaviour occurs The book explores the capacity of the resulting model to explain consumer behaviour in retail and consumption situations and to elucidate brand choice The result is a novel interrogation of cognitive and behavioural perspectives an overarching philosophy for consumer research

Emotions, Advertising and Consumer Choice Flemming Hansen,Sverre Riis Christensen,2007 Emotions Advertising and Consumer Choice focuses on recent neurological and psychological insights originating from brain scanning or neurological experiments on basic emotional processes in the brain and their role in controlling human behaviour These insights are translated by the authors to cover the behaviour of ordinary individuals in everyday life The book looks at these developments in the light of traditional cognitive theories of consumer choice and it discusses the implications for advertising and other communication testing Jacket

The Continuum of Consumer Choice Gordon R. Foxall,2024-03-12 Human consumption is multi faceted and so requires inter disciplinary exploration in order to explain a spectrum of experiences that is at once particular and allpervading Consumer choice is a microcosm of human activity which transcends the purview of the archetypal marketing or consumer psychology textbook Its perspective is that of social science itself This book understands the study of consumer choice as a paradigm of human socio economic activity and seeks further understanding of its socio economic and philosophical bases The Continuum of Consumer Choice provides a novel view of consumer choice based on the temporal horizon of the consumer giving rise to a spectrum of consumption styles from the everyday to the extreme The focus is on explaining this continuum in behavioral cognitive and neurophysiological terms affording the reader a unique perspective on the intellectual basis of consumer psychology and marketing The reader gains insight into a critical combination of economic psychology neurophysiology and philosophy which contributes to establishing marketing and consumer research as scholarly academic pursuits The book s particular focus is the proper place and form of an intentional cognitive and perceptual explanation of consumer choice This is an essential monograph for advanced students in consumer psychology and marketing as well as for researchers in these areas It is particularly relevant to marketing and consumer theory providing appreciation of their scholarly foundations It also appeals to students lecturers and researchers in social science generally who are alert to the intellectual potential of consumer psychology and marketing as contributors to a full understanding of human behavior and experience

Consumer Choice in Historical Archaeology S.M. SpencerWood,2013-06-29 Historical archaeology has made great strides during the last two decades Early archaeological reports were dominated by descriptions of features and artifacts while research on artifacts was concentrated on studies of topology technology and chronology Site reports from the 1960s and 1970s commonly expressed faith in the potential artifacts had for aiding in the identifying socioeconomic status differences and for understanding the relationships between the social classes in terms of their material culture An emphasis was placed on the presence or absence of porcelain or teaware as an indication of social status These were typical features in site reports written just a few years ago During this same period advances were being made in the study of food bone as archaeologists moved away from bone counts to minimal animal counts and then on to the costs of various cuts of meat Within the last five years our ability to address questions of the relationship between material culture and socioeconomic status has greatly expanded The essays in this volume present efforts toward measuring expenditure and consumption patterns represented by commonly recovered artifacts and food bone These patterns of consumption are examined in conjunction with evidence from documentary sources that provide information on occupations wealth levels and ethnic affiliations of those that did the consuming One of the refreshing aspects of these papers is that the authors are not afraid of documents and their use of them is not limited to a role of confirmation

Consumer choice of dry common beans in Malawi: the case of Lilongwe City Phiri, Horace,Edriss, Abdi Khalil,Mapemba, Lawrence,Tumeo, Marynia,2017-09-01 Considering the potential of grain legumes for reducing hunger and malnutrition this paper aims at identifying factors shaping demand for and consumption of dry common bean from a consumer's perspective Understanding and addressing these factors has potential to increase common bean consumption by enabling breeders to breed common beans with attributes that are preferred by consumers The study employed a quantitative approach to assess various aspects of household common bean consumption from primary data collected in Lilongwe city The study results suggest that socio economic factors such as household size education gender income and number of children under the age of five years in the household play an important role in a household's decision to consume common beans and the respective quantities consumed. Various product attributes such as grain size, gravy quality and cooking time also influenced a household's decision to consume common beans. Consumer choices and demand for tilapia in urban Malawi: What are the complementarities and trade-offs? Chikowi, Christopher T. M., Ochieng, Dennis O., Jumbe, Charles B. L., 2020-01-09

Despite concerted efforts to develop the fisheries sector in many developing countries, fish demand remains poorly understood due to weak and fragmented domestic markets, particularly in Africa south of the Sahara. An important area that affects the development of the fishery sector is limited understanding of how the choice between different fish products is affected by the socioeconomic characteristics of consumers, marketing factors and fish-specific attributes. Previous studies in Malawi have assessed consumer choice and demand for fish in general without considering species-specific consumer choices. This paper analyzes consumer choices and demand for two species of tilapia, Lake Malawi Oreochromis Nyasalapia spp. Ny and Oreochromis shiranus Os, in unprocessed and processed form in urban Malawi. We use data collected from a sample of 584 urban households in Malawi's two major cities, Blantyre and Lilongwe. Multivariate probit and seemingly unrelated regression models are employed to analyze the correlates of consumer choice and demand for tilapia products. Even though most consumers chose farmed tilapia Os over the wild tilapia Ny, our results indicate trade-offs in choice but complementarities in demand for unprocessed and processed tilapia products. We find that the correlates of choice are not the same as correlates of demand for tilapia products. This is explained by heterogeneous consumer profiles, market conditions and tilapia trait descriptors. Developing robust tilapia value chains requires exploiting these complementarities and trade-offs. Policy support to boost tilapia production and reducing its relative caloric price to consumers. These measures will contribute to increased consumer demand. More generally, fish breeding programs should also link breeding objectives to consumer choices and demand for fisheries products, particularly considering rarely examined fish attributes such as its nutritive value and body texture. Perspectives on Consumer Choice Gordon R. Foxall, 2016-10-11. Evaluating the ways in which we construe consumer choice, this book examines the psychology, methods and realities of the role it plays for today's consumer. Confronted by competing brands and products, services and e-tailed opportunities that are but a click away, how does the consumer choose among them to achieve the particular array of goods to suit their lifestyle? Consumer researchers often seek to explain consumer choice by attributing it to beliefs, desires, attitudes and intentions in the absence of any theoretical justification. Perspectives on Consumer Choice is the outcome of a research program that employs cognitive explanations in a responsible and disciplined way to genuinely elucidate consumer choice in social scientific terms. Employing a reasoned approach to understanding consumption this book builds upon theoretical and empirical research in economic psychology behavioral economics and philosophy as well as marketing and consumer research

Conscious and Unconscious Consumer Choice of Food Products Florian Schleicher, 2013-12-09 Master's Thesis from the year 2013 in the subject Psychology Work Business Organisation grade 2.3 Technical University of Munich language English abstract When going for grocery shopping some consumers make up their minds about what to buy and write down shopping lists Others just go into the supermarket and do not really think beforehand about the things they need Although in both situations individuals engage in different ways of decision making on the purchase of groceries when coming home and putting things into the shelves they positively or negatively assess the things they bought Whereas in some situations one gets a positive feeling because e.g. s/he purchased all the products on the shopping list In another situation a consumer might end up being bored because s/he just bought the groceries which are perceived as useful and did not listen to his/her inner voice calling for more than just the fulfillment of utilitarian needs Generally consumers can consciously do their purchases and decide for products after thinking on it or can consider a product's attributes and let their intuition decide In the interest of the consumer the question emerges how the consumer decides at best Does a consumer receive greater satisfaction from consciously elaborating about the products s/he is facing or is it better not to think consciously when facing product choices This question is differently assessed by different models on decision making Whereas some authors Ajzen 2011 Bandura 1986 1997 Deci Payne et al 1993 emphasize consciousness in decision making there is also a large number of proponents of unconscious thought Dijksterhuis 2004 Dijksterhuis et al 2005 2006a 2006b 2006c Levine 1996 Bargh 2002 and Wilson et al 1993 Dijksterhuis and Nordgren 2006b p. 96 argue for the superiority of unconscious decision making by mentioning that conscious thought is constrained by the low capacity of consciousness which results in sub-optimal choices With regard to food products this general superiority of unconscious thought is highly questionable On the one hand consumers constrain themselves in taking into account only specific products which respect certain criteria as e.g. with diabetics and food products with less sugar content On the other hand food products are also bought because consumers want to confirm their conscience by purchasing e.g. fair trade products which among other things are associated with a fair payment of farmers

Ethics in Consumer Choice Nina Langen, 2012-12-20 This dissertation elaborates differences and similarities of forms of ethical behaviour in general and analyses whether German consumers differentiate between different types of ethical behaviour in particular The thesis is characterised by its intensive combination of theoretical and empirical research It furthermore contributes to the literature as the method triangulation applied in the different surveys reveals previously unknown relationships between different kinds of ethical behaviour such as ethical consumption and charitable giving as well as between different forms of ethical products Choice experiment latent class analysis information display matrix and item based attitude assessment allowed the comparison of stated and revealed preferences as well as an analysis of the relevance of ethical product features within the context of different product and process attributes The dissertation provides insights into a research field which is becoming more and more relevant and improves the understanding of consumers assessment and the interdependencies of the possibilities of ethical behaviour This allows the development of recommendations for consumer policy makers business and NGOs concerned with the ethics of consumer choice as well as future research on ethical behaviour in general and ethical consumption in particular     "Expanding Consumer Choice and Addressing 'adverse Selection' Concerns in Health Insurance" United States.
