Consumption Jobs And The Environment:

Consumption, Jobs and the Environment R. Carr-Hill, J. Lintott, 2002-11-26 Consumption Jobs and the Environment argues that the present pattern of development based on everlasting economic growth is completely unsatisfactory from a welfare point of view. It threatens ecological catastrophe while perpetuating poverty. Roy Carr Hill and John Lintott propose an alternative policy framework based explicitly on welfare and suggest where cuts in consumption, working hours and ecological risks might be made most usefully. Consumption, Jobs and the Environment Roy A. Carr-Hill, John Lintott, 2002

Environment, Employment and Development A. S. Bhalla, 1992 This study examines the employment implications of sustainable development especially for developing countries and reviews current approaches to minimizing environmental degradation. Spectacular economic growth since 1945 based largely on technological advance has entailed major environmental costs which this book claims cannot be sustained except at the risk of our own survival. They typically provide half of all jobs. In addition, they foster entrepreneurship and help key sectors adapt to changing market conditions. In light of these benefits, programs promoting small firms have become a cornerstone of economic development policy. Increasingly, however, scholars and policymakers are also exploring the link between small firms and the environment. The first compendium of research and policy analysis on this topic, this book is organized around three questions: How important is small firm pollution? Will forcing small firms to comply with environmental regulations exacerbate unemployment and poverty? And what policy options are available to control small firm pollution? Eleven case studies from China, Ecuador, Honduras, India, Malaysia, and Mexico address these questions. They compare the environmental damages caused by small firms and large ones. They explore the positive and negative economic consequences of pollution control strategies focusing on small firms, the administrative challenges of regulating thousands of firms which are often unregistered and unknown to the government, and they describe innovative approaches for persuading small firms to implement effective pollution controls. The case studies cover a variety of industrial sectors including ceramics, leather tanning, textiles, and agro industry, and evaluate a wide range of environmental management strategies that include encouraging collective action among small firms creating economic incentives for pollution control and helping small firms adopt clean technologies and environmental management systems Many of the chapters are groundbreaking addressing topics new to the literature for example the role of international trade in greening small firms and funding small firm pollution control projects by linking them to efforts to stem global warming Highly readable Small Firms and the Environment in Developing Countries is a valuable text for courses in development policy and economics that have an environmental component or focus It will also prove of interest to development workers policymakers in developing countries and students and scholars of environmental policy and law DDC Retrieval and Indexing only involve products or services that are changed for a local market by simple substitution or the omitting of functions. Products and services need to be addressed that ensure a high standard of living everywhere. Resources required for manufacturing and use of such products are limited and not evenly distributed in the world. Locally available resources, local capabilities as well as local constraints have to be drivers for product and process innovations with respect to the entire life cycle. The 18th CIRP International Conference on Life Cycle Engineering (LCE 2011) serves as a platform for the discussion of the resulting challenges and the collaborative development of new scientific ideas.

Destination Competitiveness, the Environment and Sustainability Andres Artal-Tur, Metin Kozak, 2015-12-09. Destination competitiveness and sustainability are important issues for many stakeholders within the tourism industry. In recent years, destinations have faced some challenges with respect to maintaining sustainability; they must be cleaner, greener, and safer in order to safeguard the life quality of holidaymakers and local residents. Providing an invaluable review of the latest research on the topic, global case studies provide a perspective of the worldwide challenges and solutions arising in the management of tourism destinations. The analysis presents an interdisciplinary approach including contributions of economists, geographers, managers, and marketing professionals.

Work, Learning and Sustainable Development John Fien, Rupert Maclean, Man-Gon Park, 2008-10-26. This book is the first that provides a comprehensive overview of the way countries' education systems and institutions have responded to the call for an integration of learning for work, citizenship, and sustainability at the Second International Conference on Technical and Vocational Education which was held in Seoul in 1999. Discussions on the central theme of the Seoul Conference, lifelong learning and training for all, a bridge to the future, led to the conclusion that a new paradigm of both development and Technical and Vocational Education (TVET) was needed. This book showcases the wide range of international initiatives that have sought to put such exhortations into practice. It includes case studies of national TVET policy reforms, reoriented curricula, sustainable campus management programs, and examples of innovative approaches to integrating learning in TVET with on-the-job training and in community service. It also focuses on the issues and challenges being faced and ways of moving forward. Case studies feature initiatives in a wide range of world regions and countries and include authors from UK, Germany, Finland, Canada, USA, Australia, South Africa, China, Republic of Korea, India, Pakistan, and the Philippines.
