

Critical Reading and Writing in the Humanities

7 pages | 1539 words

1. Reflective Essay (Diagnostic)

Describe briefly your experiences with writing at the pre-university level. Discuss how any factor or an individual has influenced your approach and/or attitude to writing. Explain your expectations of this course. (300 words)

2. Essay Outline and Annotated Bibliography-20%

Annotated Bibliography

Compiling a list of annotated references will help you to become familiar with a variety of perspectives on your chosen topic so that you can begin to formulate or strengthen your view about it. Based on information gathered from the library session as well as from class readings and discussions on critical thinking, you will summarise each source's content and critically evaluate its relevance to your documented essay in no more than 150 words per source. NB. Only four sources are required for this activity.

Each of the entries in this single-spaced document will consist of the following three sections: The publication details of the source in M.L.A or A.P.A. format.

Paragraph 1 - a succinct summary of the main ideas and supporting points of the source, an explanation of the author's purpose and a description of the intended audience

Paragraph 2 – short discussion of the author's credibility of the relevance of the source to your topic.

3. The Response Paper -20%

The response paper requires students to summarise, explore and critically analyse a written text. This allows for the communication of the students' perspective on the author's ideas.

4. The Documented Essay-30%

The research and writing processes in which you will engage as you prepare this assignment are outlined on the seminar schedule. Before writing your first draft, you will select a theme/topic that is relevant to your discipline; generate ideas on it; narrow it to a researchable theme/topic that can be reasonably explored in a 1000-word essay for a general academic audience; prepare a short proposal; research the topic and make relevant notes; write an annotated bibliography which evaluates your source materials and prepare your essay outline (with sources included). You are required to show evidence of at least four (4) scholarly/reputable/credible sources which must include at least one journal article and a book. Only one newspaper article (not news item) is allowed.

5. Collaborative Project/Group Presentation- 10% Students will work in groups to present research or analysis of a theme from their discipline. Works of art, songs, poetry, films and written text may be used.

6. Final Reflective Essay -20% Instructions will be given in seminar.
