Growing Rose Flowers Harshita Joshi, 2019-03-29 Roses are known as the Queen of Flowers. Roses are always in demand as they are the only flowers that are associated with beauty, fragrance and eternal love. Regarded as the most important cut flower world wide commercially as well as aesthetically, roses are traditionally grown as perennial woody shrubs. Generally the growth habit of the rose plant is to grow as an erect shrub, however trailing roses or climber roses with stems having prickles are not so uncommon. The flower size normally varies from large single roses used as cut flowers to small bushy roses or bunch roses used for bedding purposes depending on varieties. The flower color is available in almost all color ranges such as white, purple, violet, yellow, orange, red, maroon and magenta. New hybrids and propagation methods have made it possible to cultivate a single variety of rose plant with multiple colored flowers.

Postharvest Biotechnology of Flowers and Ornamental Plants Dattajirao K. Salunkhe, Narayana R. Bhat, Babasaheb B. Desai, 2012-12-06 The floricultural industry has been undergoing an unprecedented revolution in terms of the type of commodity produced and the production and marketing technology in both developed and developing countries. As a result of this revolution as we know today there is a flower for every purpose and for every person in the world as is evident from the slogan of the Society for American Florists: say it with flowers. In recent years the Latin American and European countries have become sizeable competitors for the North American fresh flower markets and the trend continues growing. Like any other crop production, floricultural production can be divided into three basic factors: 1. production costs, 2. quality, 3. transportation costs. All these must be optimum for this area or industry to be safe from competition. With increasing consumer awareness and the current recession, the pressure from the artificial floral products industry and also of neighbouring countries on the American fresh flower industry and continued competition even amongst the growers, wholesalers and retailers, quality in floricultural industry is becoming increasingly important to all those concerned with handling these products. The visual quality aspects of the product are the sole determiner of consumer acceptability in this industry and unlike fruits and vegetables, flowers cannot be marketed by just discarding the damaged portion.
