

Celebrating CWLA's Kinship Care History: 30 Years of Caring, Collaborating, and Advocacy

A Tradition of Caring, Collaborating, and Advocacy:
CWLA's Three Decades of Dedication to Kinship Caregiving Families

1991

- CWLA proposed "Kinship Care" as the name for the full-time protection and nurturing of children by relatives, members of Tribes or clans, non-related extended family members, or anyone children and relatives identify as kin. The definition was recommended by the National Commission on Family Foster Care, convened by CWLA in collaboration with the National Foster Parent Association, and published as a chapter, "The Significance of Kinship Care," in the book, A Blueprint for Fostering Infants, Children, and Youths in the 1990s. Until then, there was no widely recognized or defined name; the Commission selected "kinship care" based on the book by Dr. Carol B. Stack, All Our Kin—Strategies for Survival in a Black Community. The National Commission advocated for kinship care to be recognized as an "essential first option" to be considered when parents and children were separated and under the formal jurisdiction of child protective services. "Informal kinship" was defined as arrangements made by family members or others who identified as "kin."
- We created a staff position of "National Kinship Care Program Director" to help ensure the organization's commitment to kinship care.
- We created a North American Kinship Care Committee with the Kinship Care Program Director serving as a liaison.

1994

- We published the book Kinship Care: A Natural Bridge, detailing the recommendations of the CWLA North American Kinship Care Committee.

1996

- We published a special issue of the journal Child Welfare, featuring articles on kinship care research, policy, practice, and advocacy.

1997

- We convened the first National Kinship Care Conference in San Francisco, with Dr. Carol Stack as the keynote speaker.
- We published the book, Relatives Raising Children: An Overview of Kinship Care, with seven chapters highlighting the benefits and challenges; clinical concepts; assessment and interventions; case management; race/culture considerations; legal relationships; federal and state policy and program issues; and a case study.

1999

- We convened the National Kinship Care Conference "Intervening with Kinship Families" in Atlanta.
