Utopic Dreams and Apocalyptic Fantasies Talmadge J. Wright, David G. Embrick, Andras Lukacs, 2010-09-25 Few books have attempted to contextualize the importance of video game play with a critical social cultural and political perspective that raises the question of the significance of work pleasure fantasy and play in the modern world The study of why video game play is fun has often been relegated to psychology or the disciplines of cultural anthropology literary and media studies communications and other assorted humanistic and social science disciplines In Utopic Dreams and Apocalyptic Fantasies Talmadge Wright David Embrick and Andras Lukacs invites us to move further and consider questions on appropriate methods of researching games understanding the carnival quality of modern life the role of marketing in altering game narratives and the role of fantasy and desire in modern video game play Embracing an approach that combines a cultural and or critical studies approach with a sociological understanding of this new media moves the debate beyond simple media effects moral panics and industry boosterism to one of asking critical questions what does modern video game play mean what questions should we be asking and what can sociological research contribute to answering these questions This collection includes works which use textual analysis audience based research symbolic interactionism as well as political economic and psychoanalytic perspectives to illuminate areas of inquiry that preserves the pleasure of modern play while asking tough questions about what such pleasure means in a world divided by political economic cultural and social inequalities

Memory, Conflict and New Media Ellen Rutten, Julie Fedor, Vera Zvereva, 2013-04-12 This book examines the online memory wars in post Soviet states where political conflicts take the shape of heated debates about the recent past and especially World War II and Soviet socialism To this day former socialist states face the challenge of constructing national identities producing national memories and relating to the Soviet legacy Their pasts are principally intertwined changing readings of history in one country generate fierce reactions in others In this transnational memory war digital media form a pivotal discursive space one that provides speakers with radically new commemorative tools Uniting contributions by leading scholars in the field Memory Conflict and New Media is the first book length publication to analyse how new media serve as a site of political and national identity building in post socialist states The book also examines how the construction of online identity is irreversibly affected by thinking about the past in this geopolitical domain By highlighting post socialist memory's digital mediations and digital memory's transcultural scope the volume succeeds in a twofold aim to deepen and refine both post socialist memory theory and digital memory studies This book will be of much interest to students of media studies post Soviet studies Eastern European Politics memory studies and International Relations in general
