Alan Buchsbaum:

Exquisite Corpse Michael Sorkin, 1991 Exquisite Corpse was a game played by the surrealists in which someone drew on a piece of paper folded it and passed it to the next person to draw on until finally the sheet was opened to reveal a calculated yet random composition In this entertaining and provocative book Michael Sorkin suggests that cities are similarly assembled by many players acting with varying autonomy in a complicit framework An unfolding terrain of invention the city is also a means of accommodating disparity of contextualizing sometimes startling juxtapositions Sorkin's aim is to widen the debate about the creation of buildings beyond the immediate issues of technology and design He discusses the politics and culture of architecture with daring often devastating observations about the institutions and personalities who have dominated the profession over the past decade Their preoccupation with the empty style of beach houses and Disneyland has consistently trivialized the full constructive scope of contemporary architecture's possibilities Sorkin's interventions range from the development scandals of New York where skyscrapers stand at the intersection between grid and greed through the deconstructivist architectural culture of Los Angeles to the work and ideas of architects developers and critics such as Alvar Aalto Norman Foster Paul Goldberger Michael Graves Coop Himmelblau Philip Johnson Leon Krier Frank Lloyd Wright Richard Rogers Carlo Scarpa James Stirling Donald Trump Tom Wolfe and Lebbeus Woods Throughout Sorkin combines stinging polemic with a powerful call for a rebirth of architecture that is visionary and experimental a recuperated dreamy science

Building/Object Charlotte Ashby, Mark Crinson, 2024-01-25 Building Object addresses the space in between the conventional objects of design and the conventional objects of architecture probing and reassessing the differences between the disciplines of design history and architectural history Each of the 13 chapters in this book examine things which are neither object like nor building like but somewhere in between air conditioning bookshelves partition walls table monuments TVs convenience stores cars exposing particular political configurations and resonances that otherwise might be occluded In doing so they reveal that the definitions we make of objects in opposition to buildings and of architecture in opposition to design are not as fundamental as they seem This book brings new aspects of the creative and experiential into our understanding of the human environment
