Maternal Substance Abuse and the Developing Nervous System Ian S. Zagon,Theodore A. Slotkin,2012-12-02 The purpose of this book is to review the basic science and clinical findings concerning maternal substance abuse and the developing nervous system of unborn children The short term but vitally significant repercussions of such exposure on biological development with particular reference to the nervous system are discussed The book also discusses the profound influence of maternal substance abuse on behavior in adulthood which is caused by subtle changes in the chemistry or structure of the developing nervous system The subject will not only be of interest to clinical and basic science researchers and teachers in the field of maternal substance abuse but also to individuals in psychology social work cellular and molecular biology embryology neuroscience pharmacology and in clinical professions such as pediatrics neonatology and obstetrics The breadth of topics covered includes alcohol cocaine opiates nicotine benzodiazepines marijuana and the role of stress and hormones Emphasis is placed on the relationship of the effects of substance abuse on neurotrophic factors and receptors Shows how abused substances act directly or indirectly to mimic or influence the action of neurotrophic factors Explains that the transient expression of peptides neurotransmitters and receptors can be markedly disturbed by drugs Demonstrates that animal and tissue culture studies are consistent with clinical observations and important in understanding and ameliorating adverse actions of drugs in early life authoritative 1996 publication was the first to review comprehensively the important relationship between maternal alcohol abuse during pregnancy and the resulting in utero damage to the child and the results of this damage during the development of affected children. It includes important contributions by leading and internationally acclaimed clinicians and researchers. The first part of the book discusses clinical issues of alcohol teratogenicity, the clinical picture of fetal alcohol syndrome and the epidemiology of maternal alcohol abuse and the developmental outcome of the children. The second part addresses pathogenesis and neuropathology whilst part three reviews developmental issues in the growing child. The final part evaluates approaches to rehabilitation and intervention and reviews social and public health issues. This comprehensive account will be of interest to gynaecologists, obstetricians, midwives, neonatologists and paediatricians and for child and adolescent psychiatrists and psychologists.

Sourcebook of Models for Biomedical Research P. Michael Conn, 2008-03-07. The collection of systems represented in Sourcebook of genomic programs although this work is certainly well. Models for Biomedical Research is an effort to reflect the represented and indexed diversity and utility of models that are used in biomedicine. Some models have been omitted due to page limitations. That utility is based on the consideration that observations and we have encouraged the authors to use tables and made in particular organisms will provide insight into the genes to make comparisons of models so that observations workings of other more complex systems. Even the cell not available in primary publications can become useful to cycle in the simple yeast cell has similarities to that in the reader humans and regulation with similar proteins occurs. We thank Richard Lansing and the staff at Humana for. Some models have the advantage that the reproductive guidance through the publication process mitotic development or aging cycles are rapid compared. As this book was entering production we learned of the with those in humans others are utilized because individual loss of Tom Lanigan Sr. Tom was a leader and innovator proteins may be studied in an advantageous way and that in scientific publishing and a good friend and colleague to have human homologs. Other organisms are facile to grow all in the exploratory enterprise. We dedicate this book to in laboratory settings or lend themselves to convenient analysis his memory. We will miss him greatly.

Experimental models of early exposure to alcohol: a way to unravel the neurobiology of mental retardation Alberto Granato, Andrea De Giorgio, 2015-01-27. Excessive alcohol drinking represents a major social and public health problem for several countries. Alcohol abuse during pregnancy leads to a complex syndrome referred to as fetal alcohol spectrum disorders (FASD) chiefly characterized by mental retardation. The effects of early exposure to ethanol can be reproduced in laboratory animals and this helped to answer several key questions concerning the human pathology. The interest of experimental models of FASD is twofold. First they increase our knowledge about the dose and modality of alcohol consumption able to induce damaging effects on the developing brain. Second experimental models of FASD can provide useful hints to elucidate the basic mechanisms leading to the intellectual disability In fact experimental exposure to alcohol can be carried out during discrete often very restricted time windows As a consequence FASD models though depending on the multifaceted interference of alcohol with several molecular pathways can provide valuable information about which specific developmental periods and brain areas are critically involved in the genesis of mental retardation Putting together data obtained through several experimental paradigms of alcohol exposure and those deriving from other genetic and non genetic models one can figure out to what extent different types of mental retardation share common pathogenetic mechanisms The present Research Topic is aimed at establishing the state of the art of the current research on experimental FASD focusing on differences and homologies with other types of intellectual disability The ultimate goal is to find out a common roadmap in view of future therapeutical approaches
