The Airship Ladyship Adventure Jonathan Gathorne-Hardy, 1977 Launched by mistake in a magnificent airship a young girl embarks on some harrowing adventures

With Airship and Submarine: A Tale of Adventure Harry Collingwood, It was late afternoon on a certain grey and dismal day toward the latter part of February that two men happened to encounter each other after a long interval upon the steps of the Migrants Club The one a tall well built and exceedingly handsome man with blond curly hair and beard and moustache to match was entering the building while the other a much shorter and stouter figure with a cast of features which rendered his German origin unmistakable was standing upon the top step puffing at a cigar as he leisurely drew on his gloves preparatory to his emergence upon the street As the two men glanced at each other the light of mutual recognition leaped into their eyes and in a moment the right hand of each was locked in the cordial grip of the other Ach mine vriendt exclaimed the shorter of the two as he beamed up at the other through his gold rimmed spectacles how are you and how is her ladyship Both quite well I hope Thanks Professor yes we are both as hale and hearty as we can possibly wish But I am sorry to say that my little daughter by the way are you aware that I have a daughter Ach yes I heard of it zomebody toldt me of it but I vorget who it vas now Led me gongradulade you upon the zirgumstance if it be nod doo lade Thanks very much Professor congratulations upon such an event are never too late especially when they are sincere as I know yours to be But condolence is more appropriate than congratulation just now for I am sorry to say that the poor child is far from well indeed Lady Olivia and I are exceedingly anxious about her so much so that we have brought her up to town to secure the opinion of a medical specialist upon her case and he advises complete change of air and scene for her And that is what brings me to the Migrants to day where by the greatest piece of good luck I have found the very man yourself Professor that I was most anxious to find Good exclaimed the professor you wanted to vind me and here I am quide at your service my dear Sir Reginald Whad gan I do vor you A very great deal if you will answered the baronet or rather if you have nothing particular on your hands just now I ought to say for I feel sure that if you are not otherwise engaged I may depend upon your falling in with my scheme now that I have happily found you Of gourse replied the professor That goes midoudt zaying Well I am not engaged at bresend upon anydings bardigular excepd the elaboration of a rather Utopian scheme for the benefit of mangind generally and especially those unfortunade beobles who in gonsequence of the over bobulation of the gread zentres of indusdry vind themselves unable to brogure embloymend and earn a living Bud this scheme is only in my brain as yed energetically pointing to his expansive forehead as he spoke and gan be worked oudt anywhere widoud obstruction to other projecds so my dear Sir Reginald if you require my aid in any way you may gommand me Berhaps we may be able to help each other You are of course more than welcome to any aid that I can afford you answered the handsome baronet as Sir Reginald Elphinstone s friends sometimes called him behind his back of course But where are you going he continued Anywhere in particular If so I will walk a little way with you Or if you are not bound upon the fulfilment of any engagement let us go up into the smoking room and have a chat there I am not boundt anywhere in bardigular and the smoking room is quide empty so led us go there by all means exclaimed the professor as he linked his arm in that of his companion and together the strongly contrasted pair wended their way through the handsome entrance hall of the building and up the spacious marble staircase to the cosiest smoking room in all London The taller and more striking looking of the two was Sir Reginald Elphinstone a baronet and an immensely wealthy man with a magnificent estate in the heart of the most picturesque part of Devonshire a lovely wife and a most charming lovable little daughter now just five years old The baronet himself had barely passed his fortieth year and was a superb specimen of English manhood standing full six feet two in his stockings with a fine athletic figure blue eyes that ordinarily beamed with kindness and good humour but which could upon occasion flash withering scorn or scathing anger upon an offender and curly golden hair with beard and moustache to match that made him look like a viking got up in the style of a twentieth century English gentleman Catalog of Copyright
