victims on both sides of a conflict Migration and Development Great Britain. Parliament. House of Commons. International Development Committee, 2004 The Committee's report finds that although migration is not a panacea for development problems if properly managed it can deliver major economic gains in terms of poverty reduction It shows how governments and others could by shaping the nature of migration and the distribution of its costs and benefits make migration work for the poor It highlights five myths which surround the subject including the fear that there is a tidal wave of migrants about to crash on our shores and that it is the poorest most desperate people who migrate The Committee's report argues that effective policies implemented at each stage of the migration journey by the UK and other developed countries in developing countries and at a multilateral level can make migration work for poverty reduction This includes the need to regulate recruitment policies in rich countries to reduce problems of brain drain from poorer countries tackling human trafficking and illegal migration better managed migration and promotion of resource flows including remittances created by migration Ultimately managing migration for poverty reduction is beyond any single nation state and requires effective partnerships bilaterally and at the multinational level Qualitative Research in European Migration Studies Ricard Zapata-Barrero, Evren Yalaz, 2018-06-19 This open access book covers the main issues challenges and techniques concerning the application of qualitative methodologies to the study of migration It discusses theoretical epistemological and empirical questions that must be considered before during and after undertaking qualitative research in migration studies It also covers recent innovative developments and addresses the key issues and major challenges that qualitative migration research may face at different stages i.e. crafting the research questions defining approaches developing concepts and theoretical frameworks mapping categories selecting cases dealing with concerns of self reflection collecting and processing empirical evidence through various techniques including visual data dealing with ethical issues and developing policy research dialogues Each chapter discusses relative strengths and limitations of qualitative research The chapters also identify the main drivers for qualitative research development in migration studies It is a unique volume as it brings together a multidisciplinary perspective as well as illustrations of different issues derived from the research experience of the recognized authors One additional value of this book is its geographic focus on Europe It seeks to explore theoretical and methodological issues that are raised by distinctive features of the European context This volume will be a useful reference source for scholars and professionals in migration studies and in social sciences as well The publication is also addressed to graduate and post graduate students and more generally to those who embark on the task of doing qualitative research for the first time in the field of migration Albania Gillian Gloyer, 2008 Written by an insider and Albania enthusiast the Bradt guide to Albania takes a fresh look at how and where to explore the heritage of this hidden corner of eastern Europe Anti-Oppressive Practice in Health and Social Care Viola Nzira, Paul Williams, 2008-11-11 Anti Oppressive Practice in Health and Social Care presents a distinctive holistic approach to developing anti oppressive practice in a range of health

Differentiating Development Soumhya Venkatesan,Thomas Yarrow,2012-04-01 Over the last two decades anthropological studies have highlighted the problems of development as a discursive regime arguing that such initiatives are paradoxically used to consolidate inequality and perpetuate poverty This volume constitutes a timely intervention in anthropological debates about development moving beyond the critical stance to focus on development as a mode of engagement that like anthropology attempts to understand represent and work within a complex world By setting out to elucidate both the similarities and differences between these epistemological endeavors the book demonstrates how the ethnographic study of development challenges anthropology to rethink its own assumptions and methods In particular contributors focus on the important but often overlooked relationship between acting and understanding in ways that speak to debates about the role of anthropologists and academics in the wider world The case studies presented are from a diverse range of geographical and ethnographic contexts from Melanesia to Africa and Latin America and ethnographic research is combined with commentary and reflection from the foremost scholars in the field
