Language Acquisition and the Functional Category System Peter Jordens, 2012-12-06 Research on spontaneous language acquisition both in children learning their mother tongue and in adults learning a second language has shown that language development proceeds in a stagewise manner Learner utterances are accounted for in terms of so called learner languages Learner languages of both children and adults are language systems that are initially rather simple The present monograph shows how these learner languages develop both in child L1 and in adult L2 Dutch At the initial stage of both L1 and L2 Dutch learner systems are lexical systems This means that utterance structure is determined by the lexical projection of a predicate argument structure while the functional properties of the target language are absent At some point in acquisition this lexical semantic system develops into a target like system With this target like system learners have reached a stage at which their language system has the morpho syntactic features to express the functional properties of finiteness and topicality Evidence of this is word order variation and the use of linguistic elements such as auxiliaries tense and agreement markers and determiners Looking at this process of language acquisition from a functional point of view the author focuses on questions such as the following What is the driving force behind the process that causes learners to give up a simple lexical semantic system in favour of a functional pragmatic one What is the added value of linguistic features such as the morpho syntactic properties of inflection word order variation and definiteness

United States Department of State ,1998 The Pragmatics of Requests and Apologies Elizabeth Flores Salgado, 2011 The purpose of this research is to analyse the pragmatic development of language groups at different proficiency levels and to investigate the relationship between interlanguage pragmatics and grammatical competence For this study 36 native Spanish speaking EFL learners at different proficiency levels were asked to respond in English to 24 different situations that called for the speech acts of request and apology Results showed three important aspects The first finding suggested that basic adult learners possess a pragmatic knowledge in their L1 that allows them to focus on the intended meaning and in most cases to assemble an utterance that conveys a pragmatic intention and satisfies the communicative demands of a social situation The second finding revealed that there are two essential conditions to communicate a linguistic action the knowledge of the relevant linguistic rules and the knowledge of how to use them appropriately and effectively in a specific context The findings further suggested that advanced learners possess the grammatical knowledge to produce an illocutionary act but they need to learn the specific L2 pragmatic conventions that enable them to know when to use these grammatical forms and under which circumstances
