Creating System Innovation H. de Bruijn, H. van der Voort, W. Dicke, M. de Jong, W. Veeneman, 2004-11-23 System innovation is a radical change of institutions structures and values concerning one or more entire sectors This publication from the Consultative Committee of Sectorcouncils for Research and Development in the Netherlands draws conclusions about the possible role of governments when system innovation is predominantly emergent questioning the popular idea of proactive governments in realizing system innovations The main conclusion drawn is that highly process oriented governments should focus on creating favourable conditions for system innovations instead of concentrating on content areas where these innovations might take place Three examples of realized system innovations are examined The privatization of British Rail The explosive development of a biotech industry around Boston USA and The realization of the Comprehensive Everglades Restoration Program South Florida USA It emerges from these case studies that many themes arise consistently including the role of knowledge the way initiators deal with social resistance and the role of public private interaction The authors show that even seemingly well designed system innovations contain many emergent elements and often lead to unforeseeable and unmanageable dynamics
