retired naval officer Next to his fair young daughter Clara the old sailor looked upon his yacht as one of the most beautiful things in existence Though her crew consisted but of two men and a boy and she measured scarcely five and twenty tons he declared that if it were necessary he would sail round the world in her without the slightest hesitation Flatten in the jib and take a pull at the main sheet my lads and we shall run into the bay without a tack if the wind holds as it does now he sang out The men as they came aft to execute the latter order had to disturb some of the passengers of whom there were several seated on cloaks round the skylight or standing up holding on to the weather rigging or leaning against the main boom Clara Maynard accustomed to yachting promptly moved to windward aided by Harry Caulfield a young military officer who had ridden over that morning to Luton for the pleasure of making a trip on board the yacht but her aunt Miss Sarah Pemberton looked somewhat annoyed at being asked to shift her seat Harry however came to her assistance and placed a camp stool for her against the weather bulwarks I am sorry Sarah to inconvenience you said the captain good naturedly but we haven't as much room on board the Ariadne as on the deck of a line of battle ship The captain had called his yacht after the first ship in which he went to sea The cutter having rounded a lofty point a small and beautiful bay opened out ahead and the wind remaining steady without making another tack she stood in directly for it
