International Museum of Photography and Film

Alfred Stieglitz (1864-1946) was the central figure in the struggle to establish photography as a fine art. Through his own photography, his support of other Pictorialist photographers, his gallery, and the famous periodical Camouflage, Stieglitz dedicated his life to this effort.

In his interest in modern art grew in the early years of the twentieth century, Stieglitz's approach to photography changed. His 1907 photograph, The Storage, marked a transition in his work from quiet Pictorialist studies of the city to a new fascination with the dynamic energy and graphic shapes of modern life. This dramatic shift in photographic style began a new chapter in Stieglitz's photography. What remained constant, however, was his unswerving commitment to the photographic art.

This calendar presents twelve Stieglitz photographs that mark his years in photography. Included are his 1907 Terminal, photographs of Lake George, and portraits of his wife, the painter Georgia O'Keeffe. These images are from the collection of George Eastman House International Museum of Photography and Film in Rochester, New York. Established in 1947 on the estate of Louis Stieglitz, George Eastman House is the oldest photography museum in the world and houses nearly 200,000 photographs and negatives representing more than 11,000 photographers.
