Biodeterioration of Stone Surfaces Larry St.Clair, Mark Seaward, 2012-11-02 This is a timely volume in view of the considerable interest currently shown in the preservation of our cultural heritage and the extensive and growing literature on the subject Unfortunately the latter is to be found in a wide variety of published sources some aimed at a very specific readership and therefore not all that accessible to those who need this resource The present volume draws together a spectrum of biodeterioration work from across the world to provide an overview of the materials examined and the methodologies employed to elucidate the nature of the problems as well as an extensive and current bibliographical resource on lichen biodeterioration Biodeterioration of historical and culturally important stone substrata is a complex problem to be addressed Easy risk free solutions are simply not available to be dealt with by other than a wide range of expertise Successful resolution of this issue will inevitably require a multidisciplinary effort where biologists work in close cooperation with ecologists geologists geochemists crystallographers cultural property conservators archaeologists anthropologists and historians in order to recommend the most effective management scheme The advantage of this approach is obvious multidisciplinary management teams with good leadership can ask more appropriate questions while developing much more thoughtful and informed decisions

The Materiality of Stone Christopher Tilley, 2020-06-03 With Wayne Bennett From the silky wax qualities of the surfaces of some quartz menhirs to the wood grain textures of others to the golden honeycombed limestones of Malta to the icy frozen waves of the Cambrian sandstone of south east Sweden this book investigates the sensuous material qualities of stone Tactile sensations sonorous qualities colour and visual impressions are all shown to play a vital part in our understanding of the power and significance of prehistoric monuments in relation to their landscapes In The Materiality of Stone Christopher Tilley presents a radically new way of analyzing the significance of both cultural and natural stone in prehistoric European landscapes Tilley's groundbreaking approach is to interpret human experience in a multidimensional and sensuous human way rather than through an abstract analytical gaze The studies range widely from the menhirs of prehistoric Brittany to Maltese Neolithic temples to Bronze Age rock carvings and cairns in southern Sweden Tilley leaves no stone unturned as he also considers how the internal spaces and landscape settings are interpreted in relation to artifacts substances and related places that were deeply meaningful to the people who inhabited them and remain no less evocative today In its innovative approach to understanding human experience through the tangible rocks and stone of our past The Materiality of Stone is both a major theoretical and substantive contribution to the field of material culture studies and the study of European prehistory

The Use and reuse of stone circles Courtney Nimura, Richard Bradley, 2016-09-30 The study of stone circles has long played a major role in British and Irish archaeology and for Scotland most attention has been focused on the large monuments of Orkney and the Western Isles Several decades of fieldwork have shown how these major structures are likely to be of early date and recognized that that smaller settings of monoliths had a more extended history Many of the structures in Northern Britain were reused during the later Bronze Age the Iron Age and the early medieval period A series of problems demand further investigation including when were the last stone circles built How did they differ from earlier constructions How were they related to henge monuments especially those of Bronze Age date How frequently were these places reused and did this secondary activity change the character of those sites This major new assessment first presents the results of fieldwork undertaken at the Scottish recumbent stone circle of Hillhead the stone circles of Waulkmill and Croftmoraig the stone circle and henge at Hill of Tuach at Kintore and the small ring cairn at Laikenbuie in Inverness shire Part 2 brings together the results of these five projects and puts forward a chronology for the construction and primary use of stone circles particularly the Chalcolithic and Bronze Age examples It considers the reuse of stone circles long after they were built and discusses four neighboring stone circles in Aberdeenshire which display both similarities and contrasts in their architecture use of raw materials associated artefacts and structural sequences Finally a reassessment and reinterpretation of Croftmoraig and its sequence is presented the new interpretation drawing attention to ways of thinking about these monuments which have still to fulfill their potential
