Static Forms Shir Alon, 2025-10-28 What does it mean to write a literature of the present In the early twentieth century Arabic and Hebrew writers faced a parallel predicament Modern literature aspired to reflect the contemporary moment yet the Middle Eastern present seemed incompatible with dominant literary forms especially the novel Projects of cultural awakening implied that Arabs and Jews were somehow inhabiting the present wrongly Arabic and Hebrew writers found themselves grappling with the simultaneous necessity and impossibility of narrating the present and achieved strikingly similar literary solutions to this challenge This book develops a new theory of the emergence of modernist literary forms through a series of parallel readings of Arabic and Hebrew prose Situating literary production in projects of modernization settler colonialism and state building Shir Alon traces the proliferation of what she calls static forms These literary forms articulate a modern present experienced as stuck suspended or absent embodying the lived temporalities of Orientalist fantasies of origin regimes of productive and reproductive labor and the routine violence of occupation Static Forms positions writers such as Mahmud al Mas'adi Sonallah Ibrahim Elias Khoury Adania Shibli S Y Agnon Y H Brenner and Yeshayahu Koren as innovators and theorists of global modernism writing the present as a series of suspensions of modernity's narrative of progress

Natural Resistance Mechanisms of Plants to Viruses Gad Loebenstein, John Peter Carr, 2007-05-26 Over the course of evolution most plants have acquired the ability to defend themselves against most groups of pathogens including the viruses Many antiviral resistance phenomena have been known and studied for decades but until recently understanding of their underlying mechanisms has lagged behind These phenomena include resistance to infection resistance to virus translocation through the plant recovery from infection and genetically defined resistance together with the associated phenomena of the local lesion response and induced or acquired resistance The identification and cloning of plant resistance genes characterization of downstream signaling components and especially the explosion of data regarding gene silencing mechanisms has led to rapid progress in the investigation of natural resistance phenomena Meanwhile in plant virology there has been remarkable progress in the arenas of replication movement proteins and plasmodesmatal gating and in the discovery of gene silencing suppressors Therefore it seemed timely and appropriate to link older but still important data on the well known classical resistance phenomena with the new information that has emerged during the last decade or so We hope that this book will inspire further research in this area as resistance presents the most economical and environmentally sound approach to control plant virus diseases Future technologies that emerge from this research might include an improved ability to introduce resistance genes into virus susceptible agronomically important cultivars to improve current pathogen derived resistance strategies using our new knowledge of small interfering and microRNAs or to develop targeted chemical treatments
