The Agrarian History of England and Wales: Volume 2, 1042-1350 H. E. Hallam, Joan Thirsk, 1988-12-08 This 1988 volume deals with the agrarian history of England and Wales from the beginning of the reign of Edward the Confessor to the outbreak of the Black Death in 1348 It divides the counties into regions and deals with each under the headings of new settlements agriculture and pastoralism crops and stock yield ratios and techniques including field systems crop nutrition and drainage There are also sections on the Late Saxon period Domesday England wages and prices vernacular architecture and the life of the people The volume as a whole offers a detailed description of trends both economic and social between 1042 and 1350 and of the complexities of an economy and society split into many and various sub economies and sub societies all very different from one another but closely knit and interdependent

The Agrarian History of England and Wales: G. E. Mingay, 1989-03-16 This 1989 volume continues the detailed account of the agrarian history of England and Wales and with volumes IV and V provides a continuous comprehensive study for the whole of the period 1500 to 1850 The century covered in the present volume has always been considered one of vital importance in agrarian history as being that of the classical agricultural revolution The work provides a fresh analysis and assessment of this period particularly in the estimation in terms more precise than ever before of the extent of the growth of agricultural output as well as of the prices that prevailed in the agricultural markets and the nature of those markets Other important discussions provide the essential background of technical changes in agriculture and the changes in the rural landscape the character of landownership and landed estates and social developments in the countryside The volume finishes with a large statistical appendix     The Agrarian History of England and Wales: I.
