Agricultural Change Environment And Economy:

Agricultural Change, Environment and Economy Keith Hoggart, 1992 Examines the relationships between the development of agriculture environmental conditions and the character of national economies synthesizing and comparing studies from the Third World advanced capitalist economies and Eastern Europe to distill fundamental patterns Among the themes are the impact of production techniques on both agriculture and the environment and how farm production processes are affected by factors in other areas of the economy and by political influences Of interest to readers in development farm policy or economics Annotation copyright by Book News Inc Portland OR

The Economic Impact of Climate Change on Agriculture in Cameroon, Climate Change and Agriculture Robert O. Mendelsohn, Ariel Dinar, 2009-01-01 The specific focus of this seminal work is on the economic impact of climate change on agriculture world wide and how faced with the resultant environmental alterations agriculture might adapt under varied and varying conditions Enhanced with a detailed and comprehensive index Climate Change and Agriculture is highly recommended for academic library environmental studies and economic studies reference collections and supplemental reading lists The Midwest Book Review Despite its great importance there are surprisingly few economic studies of the impact of climate on agriculture and how agriculture can adapt under a variety of conditions This book examines 22 countries across four continents including both developed and developing economies It provides both a good analytical basis for additional work and solid results for policy debate concerning income distributional effects such as abatement adaptation and equity Agriculture and grazing are a central sector in the livelihood of many people particularly in developing countries This book uses the Ricardian method to examine the impact of climate change on agriculture It also quantifies how farmers adapt to climate The findings suggest that agriculture in developing countries is more sensitive to climate than agriculture in developed countries Rain fed cropland is generally more sensitive to warming than irrigated cropland and cropland is more sensitive than livestock The adaptation to climate change results reveal that farmers make many adjustments including switching crops and livestock species adopting irrigation and moving between livestock and crops The results also reveal that impacts and adaptations vary a great deal across landscapes suggesting that adaptation policies must be location specific Finally the book suggests a research agenda for the future Economists in academia and the public sector policy analysts and development agencies will find this broad study illuminating

The Economic Impact of Climate Change on Agriculture in Cameroon Ernest L. Molua, Cornelius M. Lambi, 2012 This study examines the impact of climate change on crop farming in Cameroon The country s economy is predominantly agrarian and agriculture and the exploitation of natural resources remain the driving force for the country s economic development Fluctuations in national income are due not merely to the decline in world demand for Cameroon s traditional agricultural exports or to mistakes in economic policy making but also to the vagaries of the weather Based on a farm level survey of more than 800 farms the study employs a Ricardian cross sectional approach to measure the relationship between climate and the net revenue from crops Net revenue is regressed on climate water flow soil and economic variables Further uniform scenarios assume that only one aspect of climate changes and the change is uniform across the whole country The analysis finds that net revenues fall as precipitation decreases or temperatures increase across all the surveyed farms The study reaffirms that agriculture in Cameroon is often limited by seasonality and the availability of moisture Although other physical factors such as soil and relief have an important influence on agriculture climate remains the dominant influence on the variety of crops cultivated and the types of agriculture practiced Economic Development, Agriculture And Climate Change Antonio Yunez Naude,J Jorge Mora-rivera,2023-02-24 Climate change CC is currently an unquestionable phenomenon If not stopped it will be catastrophic for life on earth Scientific evidence shows that human activities are the primary driver of CC tendencies since the industrial times In this book we present the relationship between development and CC with special reference to agriculture the rural sector and policies aimed to promote sustainable development We also give special attention to the situation in low and medium income countries particularly rural households and small farmers in these countries The study of agriculture CC and sustainability requires consideration of natural resources and their uses land freshwater forests etc as well as the rural sector since land for agricultural production often expands at the expense of forests In addition the use of water for agricultural production affects the availability of this resource for other uses in the urban industrial and service sectors Consequently sustainable agricultural development under CC requires an interdisciplinary or at least a multidisciplinary approach In this book we do our best to deal with this challenge by focusing on issues and topics related to agriculture and its use of natural resources in the context of CC but without ignoring the interrelations of these phenomena with further aspects of sustainability beyond agriculture Agriculture: The Potential Consequences of Climate Variability and Change for the United States
