AIDS and Women's Reproductive Health Lincoln C. Chen, Jaime Sepulveda Amor, Sheldon J. Segal, 2012-12-06 Over the past decade the AIDS pandemic has propagated so widely and exerted such a devastating impact that one may properly ask the question Why not concentrate all AIDS efforts on disease control alone Why link AIDS with women's reproductive health What is the scientific basis for this linkage And how might AIDS control and women's health objectives be promoted simultaneously These questions constitute the principal themes addressed in this monograph The 15 chapters in this volume are intended to provide state of the art reviews of key interactions between AIDS and women's reproductive health for an audience of scientists and policy makers in the AIDS and population fields Impetus for this monograph comes in part from what we perceive to be an inadequate global response thus far to AIDS and women's health problems A common platform has failed to emerge among the disparate professional communities working in the areas of AIDS STDs and family planning As a result endeavors in these fields have been isolated and opportunities for joint action have been missed An enormous and as yet unharnessed potential exists for powerful interdisciplinary collaborations that could strengthen policies and programs against these pressing health problems of humankind Mental Health Aspects of Women's Reproductive Health World Health Organization, 2009 This book has reviewed the research undertaken on a broad range of reproductive health issues and their mental health determinants consequences over the last 15 years from both high and low income countries Evidence from peer reviewed journals has been used wherever possible but has been augmented with results of a specific survey initiated to gather state of the art information on reproductive and mental health issues from a variety of researchers and interested parties Valuable data from consultant reports national programme evaluations and postgraduate research work was also compiled analyzed and synthesized The Global Gag Rule and Women's Reproductive Health Yana van der Meulen Rodgers, 2018 This book supports three important messages the global gag rule has failed to achieve its goal of reducing abortions there is no definitive relationship between restrictive national abortion laws and abortion rates and the 2017 expansion of the global gag rule will adversely affect a dashboard of health indicators Development and Women's Reproductive Health in Ghana, 1920-1982 Holly Ashford, 2022-12-09 This book investigates the history of women's reproductive health in Ghana arguing that between the 1920s and 1980s it was largely driven by discourses of development and population control rather than a concern for women's health or rights Between the 1920s and 1980s the choices that Ghanaian women made regarding their reproductive health were defined by development policy and practice Spanning the colonial and immediate postcolonial periods this book demonstrates that whilst the substance of development discourse shifted over time principles of development continued to be used to impact and legitimise reproductive health policy and practices well after independence The book explores Ghana's pluralist health system the introduction of maternal and child welfare the dominance of the Red Cross in Ghana's maternal and child health landscape nationalist pronatalism and global population activism In order to understand how global iterations of development and health policy impacted ordinary lives in Ghana the author uses evidence from multiple levels including private papers national archives and records of international and transnational organisations Providing balanced archival perspectives the book includes extensive oral history interviews carried out with both rural Ghanaian women and traditional birth attendants as well as with midwives doctors and family planning fieldworkers This book will have an important impact on a number of historical fields including Ghanaian history global health history global histories of population and family planning and histories of development It will be of interest to researchers and students in the history of public health development Africa Ghana and gender

Reproductive Health and Gender Equality Guang-zhen Wang, 2016-04-08 Since the late 1990s approaches to women's reproductive health has shifted from a service based model to a human rights approach This approach associates reproductive health with freedom from discrimination and enjoyment of a satisfying and safe sex life and full access to information and services related to reproduction In spite of this shift and the global effort to promote women's reproductive health through the enhancement of human rights and gender equality progress has been very slow In this book the author fills a much needed empirical study of women's reproductive health The author assesses data from 137 developing countries or areas and challenges the prevailing bioscience and public health models by linking women's reproductive health to gender equality measures and development policies Discussion on abortion rights regional variations and reproductive health needs among refugees and internally displaced persons are also discussed This is a timely study which provides a theoretical and social policy basis for monitoring and improving women's reproductive health in developing countries This is particularly important in the light of insufficient research in the field and a lack of analysis on the empirical and theoretical linkages between reproductive health and gender equality The book will be of interest to researchers professionals and students interested in women's health issues gender women's studies and human rights
