Agricultural Trade Reform And The Doha Development Agenda:

Agricultural Trade Reform and the Doha Development Agenda Kym Anderson, Will Martin, 2005-11-16 Providing the most complete and up to date analysis of the range of agricultural issues under negotiation in the multilateral trade negotiations underway in the World Trade Organization WTO this title is a valuable resource to policymakers agricultural private sector and academics in developing and assessing the negotiating options

Agricultural Trade Reform and the Doha Development Agenda Kym Anderson, Will Martin, 2006 Builds from the essential detail of the tariffs and other protection measures and uses this information to provide an analysis of the big picture implications of proposed reforms This study highlights the risk that the potentially large gains will be lost through excessive flexibilities and exceptions Agricultural trade reform is critical to a favourable development outcome from the Doha Development agenda But agricultural policies and the policy reforms being contemplated are fiendishly complicated and the devil is in the details This study builds up from the essential detail of the tariffs and other protection measures and uses this information to provide an analysis of the big picture implications of proposed reforms The study highlights the risk that the potentially large gains will be lost through excessive flexibilities and exceptions

Agricultural Trade Reform and the Doha Development Agenda Kym Anderson, Will J. Martin, 2015 This paper examines the extent to which various regions and the world as a whole could gain from multilateral trade reform over the next decade The World Bank's LINKAGE model of the global economy is employed to examine the impact first of current trade barriers and agricultural subsidies and then of possible outcomes from the WTO's Doha round The results suggest moving to free global merchandise trade would boost real incomes in Sub Saharan Africa and Southeast Asia and in Cairns Group countries proportionately more than in other developing countries or high income countries Real returns to farm land and unskilled labor and real net farm incomes would rise substantially in those developing country regions thereby helping to reduce poverty A Doha partial liberalization could take the world some way towards those desirable outcomes but more so the more agricultural subsidies are disciplined and applied tariffs are cut and the more not just high income but also developing countries choose to engage in the process of reform subsidies are disciplined and applied tariffs are cut Reforming Agricultural Trade for Developing Countries Alex F. McCalla, John D. Nash, 2006-11-09 In the ongoing Doha Development Round of World Trade Organization negotiations developing countries have had much greater leverage due at least in part to their large and growing share of world trade But will the increased influence of developing countries translate into a final agreement that is truly more development friendly What would be key ingredients in such a final outcome of the negotiations and what would the developing countries really get out of it This two volume set seeks to answer these questions This volume Volume 2 addresses the question of how a development friendly outcome to the talks would affect developing countries by quantifying the impact of multilateral trade reform It presents several different approaches to modeling the effects of the outcome of negotiations and then investigates why these and other modeling efforts produce such divergent results Volume 1 is issues oriented It takes up some key questions in the negotiations setting the stage with a historical overview of the Doha Development Agenda to help identify issues of most significance to developing countries and then explores select issues in greater depth Aimed at policymakers and stakeholders this two volume effort puts into the public domain important analytical work that will improve the chance for a pro development outcomes of the Doha round negotiations Reforming Agricultural Trade for Developing Countries John Nash, Alex F. McCalla, 2006-11-09 In the ongoing Doha Development Round of World Trade Organization negotiations developing countries have had much greater leverage due at least in part to their large and growing share of world trade But will the increased influence of developing countries translate into a final agreement that is truly more development friendly What would be key ingredients in such a final outcome of the negotiations and what would the developing countries really get out of it This two volume set seeks to answer these questions This volume Volume 1 is issues oriented It takes up some key questions in the negotiations setting the stage with a historical overview of the Doha Development Agenda to help identify issues of most significance to developing countries and then explores select issues in greater depth Volume 2 addresses the question of how a development friendly outcome to the talks would affect developing countries by quantifying the impact of multilateral trade reform It presents several different approaches to modeling the effects of the outcome of negotiations and then investigates why these and other modeling efforts produce such divergent results Aimed at policymakers and stakeholders this two volume effort puts into the public domain important analytical work that will improve the chance for a pro development outcomes of the Doha round negotiations Finishing Global Farm Trade Reform: Kym Anderson, 2020-08-20 This study reviews policy developments in recent years and in the light of that explores ways in which further consensus might be reached among WTO members to reduce farm trade distortions and thereby also progress the multilateral trade reform agenda Particular attention is given to ways that would boost well being in developing countries especially for those food insecure households still suffering from poverty and hunger Agricultural Trade David Laborde, Will Martin, 2013-03-14 In this paper we provide an overview of the agricultural trade negotiations within the current World Trade Organization WTO negotiations and we show that including agriculture in the Doha Development Agenda talks is important both economically and politically although the political resistance to reform is particularly strong in this sector While agriculture accounts for less than 10 percent of merchandise trade high and variable agricultural distortions appear to cause the majority of the cost of distortions to global merchandise trade Within agriculture most of the costs appear to arise from trade barriers levied on imports since these barriers tend to be high variable across time and over products and levied by a wide range of countries The negotiations face a need for balance between discipline in reducing tariffs hence creating the market access gains that are central to the negotiations and flexibility in managing political pressures While the approach of providing flexibility on a certain percentage of tariff lines is seriously flawed the proposed modalities still appear to provide worthwhile market access Better ways appear to be needed to deal with developing countries concerns about food price volatility while reducing the collective action problems resulting from price insulation

Developing Countries and the Doha Development Agenda of the WTO Pitou van Dijck, Gerrit Faber, 2006-04-18

The Doha Development Agenda held the promise of substantial gains for developing countries However the realization of these gains is far from obvious the interests of various groups of countries differ greatly and technical complexities have hampered further progress since the very start of the negotiations Against the background of the agenda of the present trade negotiations of the World Trade Organization and its slow progress this enlightening book outlines the positions of the main players Its central focus is to analyze the main effects of these positions and to find a way to complete the Doha Round so a meaningful contribution to its main objective i.e. development is made Key issues discussed include the rise of the G20 group of developing countries led by Brazil China and India the reasons for the failure of the WTO Ministerial Conference at Cancun in 2003 the prospects for the poorer developing countries with emphasis on Africa in particular This timely and topical book enables the reader to monitor and evaluate the ongoing negotiations in the DDA and is a natural follow up to the bestselling 2001 Routledge title World Trade Organization Millennium Round edited by Deutsch and Speyer

Delivering on Doha Kimberly Ann Elliott, 2006

International Trade, Consumer Interests and Reform of the Common Agricultural Policy Susan Senior Nello, Pierpaolo Pierani, 2010-06-10

Brings together some of the agricultural economists in Europe to discuss pressing issues regarding the reform of the CAP such as EU agricultural trade and development policies and the role of the WTO

Agricultural Trade Reform and Poverty Reduction in Developing Countries Kym Anderson, 2016

Anderson offers an economic assessment of the opportunities and challenges provided by the World Trade Organization's Doha Development Agenda particularly through agricultural trade liberalization for low income countries seeking to trade their way out of poverty After discussing links between poverty economic growth and trade he reports modelling results showing that farm product markets remain the most costly of all goods market distortions in world trade The author focuses on what such reform might mean for developing countries both with and without their involvement in the multilateral trade negotiations

What becomes clear is that if those countries want to maximize their benefits from the Doha round they need also to free up their own domestic product and factor markets so their farmers are better able to take advantage of new market opportunities abroad. The author also addresses other concerns of low income countries about farm trade reform whether there would be losses associated with tariff preference erosion whether food importing countries would suffer from higher food prices in international markets whether China's WTO accession will provide an example of trade reform aggravating poverty by way of cuts in prices received by Chinese farmers and the impact on food security and poverty alleviation. This paper a product of the Trade Team Development Research Group is part of a larger effort in the group to understand the poverty implication of trade policy reforms. Developing Countries and Global Trade Negotiations Larry Crump, S. Javed Maswood, 2007-03-19. This book brings together an international team of leading academics and researchers to explore the main issues of the Doha Round trade negotiations. Agricultural Policy and Trade Reform Potential Effects at Global, National and Household Levels OECD, 2006-06-16. Using a combination of global national and household level analysis this study examines the potential effects of agricultural policy and trade reform. Agricultural Trade Reform and Poverty Reduction in Developing Countries Kym Anderson, 2004. The group to understand the poverty implication of trade policy reforms. Distortions to Agricultural Incentives Kym Anderson, 2009. This volume in the Distortions to Agricultural Incentives series focus on distortions to agricultural incentives from a global perspective. The WTO Hong Kong Ministerial and the Doha Development Agenda Great Britain: Parliament: House of Commons: International Development Committee, 2006-04-27. The Doha Development Agenda placed the needs and interests of developing countries at the heart of the current round of world trade talks by seeking to redress existing imbalances in the multilateral trading system which work against their interests. The Committee's report focuses on the process and outcome of the Hong Kong Ministerial meeting and makes policy recommendations to the UK Government and the European Commission about how to best ensure that the Doha Round can achieve a positive and ambitious outcome for the developing countries and to contribute most to poverty reduction. Global Issues for Global Citizens Vinay Kumar Bhargava, 2006-01-01. Written by 27 World Bank experts this book draws on the Bank's unique global capabilities and experience to promote an understanding of key global issues that cannot be solved by any one nation alone in an increasingly interconnected world. It describes the forces that are shaping public and private action to address these issues and highlights the Bank's own work in these areas. Covering four broad themes global economy global human development global environment and global governance this comprehensive volume provides an introduction to today's most pressing global issues from poverty. Handbook of Trade Policy for Development Arvid Lukauskas, Robert M. Stern, Gianni Zanini, 2013-09. This book explores the field of international trade with an emphasis on its implications for development. It provides a brief review of the main theoretical approaches and an overview of the global trading system different trading arrangements and policy issues. The European Union and

Multilateral Trade Governance Arlo Poletti, 2012-03-29 What role does the EU play in WTO trade negotiations What are the implications for the EU of the expansion of the international trade agenda that has taken place in the last fifteen years The European Union and Multilateral Trade Governance examines the EU's role in global economic governance and the negotiations of the Doha Round The book provides a comprehensive overview of the EU's role in the Doha Round of multilateral trade negotiations The empirical study is grounded in a theoretically driven discussion in order to understand trade politics dynamics in the present international economic system By providing both conceptual and empirical arguments the volume provides an innovative perspective on the analysis of the EU as a global economic influence The European Union and Multilateral Trade Governance will be of interest to students and scholars of European Union politics and international political economy
