Rita Cestti,Jitendra Srivastava,Samira Jung,2003 Agriculture Non-point Source Pollution Control Rita Cestti,Jitendra Srivastava,Samira Jung,2003 Over the last few decades the quality of many international water bodies has deteriorated resulting in economic losses from declines in the fishing industry and in tourism as well as a loss of biodiversity and health impacts from contaminated water This deterioration has been caused by many factors including nutrient run off from agriculture insufficiently treated sewage drainage of wetlands coastal erosion introduction of exotic species eutrophication and inadequate resource management One of the most significant sources of degradation has been form excessive discharge of nitrogen and phosphorus compounds nutrients due to the poor management practices used in agricultural domestic and industrial activities This publication aims to draw the attention of professionals and practitioners working in agricultural and environmental sectors to the experience and successes of the environmentally friendly good agricultural practices being used in the Chesapeake Bay Region of the United States to reduce nutrient loads in water Perspectives on the Chesapeake Bay, 1990 Michael Haire,Elizabeth C. Krome,1990 Water Quality Management in the Americas Asit K. Biswas,Cecilia Tortajada,Benedito Braga,Diego J. Rodriguez,2006-02-09 Considerable attention has been given during the past few years to the water crisis that many regions of the world may face in the coming decades While the magnitude and the extent of the global water scarcity problems of the future should not be underestimated a serious analysis of the current trends indicate that the main water crisis in the coming years is most likely to stem primarily from water quality deterioration and lack of investment funds rather than from physical water scarcities per se as is widely expected at present In spite of the seriousness of continuing water quality deterioration in most countries of the world water quality management continues to be a somewhat neglected issue in the international water community Even the magnitudes and trends of the water quality problems are not reliably known in many developed countries and in nearly all developing ones Accordingly in order to assess the current situation in water quality management in the Americas and to discuss the alternatives available to improve the existing and future water quality conditions in a cost effective and timely manner the Third World Centre for Water M anagement in Mexico the National Water Agency in Brazil Agencia Nacional deguas and the Inter American Development Bank
