

There is a growing body of research that suggests that the use of technology in the classroom can enhance student learning and engagement. This research is based on the idea that technology can provide students with access to a wide range of resources and tools that can help them to learn more effectively. For example, research has shown that students who use technology in the classroom are more likely to be engaged in their learning and to achieve higher grades than students who do not use technology. This research also suggests that technology can help to reduce the achievement gap between students from different backgrounds. For example, students from low-income backgrounds who use technology in the classroom are more likely to achieve higher grades than students from low-income backgrounds who do not use technology. This research is important because it suggests that technology can be used to improve student learning and engagement, and to reduce the achievement gap. This research also suggests that technology can be used to provide students with access to a wide range of resources and tools that can help them to learn more effectively.

Abstract The purpose of this study was to investigate the effects of a 12-week training program on the physical and psychological health of sedentary middle-aged women. The study was conducted in a community center in a large city in China. The participants were 30 women, aged 45-55, who were sedentary and had no history of cardiovascular disease. They were randomly assigned to a training group (n=15) and a control group (n=15). The training group participated in a 12-week program of aerobic exercise, strength training, and flexibility exercises, three times per week. The control group did not participate in any exercise program. The results showed that the training group had significant improvements in physical fitness, including increased aerobic capacity, muscle strength, and flexibility. They also showed significant improvements in psychological health, including reduced stress, anxiety, and depression, and increased self-esteem and quality of life. The control group showed no significant changes in any of these measures. The findings suggest that a 12-week training program can have positive effects on the physical and psychological health of sedentary middle-aged women.

The Battle for Gotham Roberta Brandes Gratz, 2010-07 In the 1970s, New York City hit rock bottom. Crime was at its highest, the middle class exodus was in high gear, and bankruptcy loomed. Many people credit New York's master builder Robert Moses with turning Gotham around, despite his brutal undemocratic and demolition-heavy ways. Urban critic and journalist Roberta Brandes Gratz contradicts this conventional view. New York City, Gratz argues, recovered precisely because of the waning power of Moses. His decline in the late 1960s and the drying up of big government funding for urban renewal projects allowed New York to organically regenerate according to the precepts defined by Jane Jacobs in her classic The Death and Life of Great American Cities and in contradiction to Mosess urban philosophy As American cities face a devastating economic crisis Jacobss philosophy is again vital for the redevelopment of metropolitan life Gratz who was named as one of Planetizens Top 100 Urban Thinkers gives an on the ground account of urban renewal and community success New York Magazine,1996-10-28 New York magazine was born in 1968 after a run as an insert of the New York Herald Tribune and quickly made a place for itself as the trusted resource for readers across the country With award winning writing and photography covering everything from politics and food to theater and fashion the magazine s consistent mission has been to reflect back to its audience the energy and excitement of the city itself while celebrating New York as both a place and an idea
