Paliwal, 2011-07-15 India's phytodiversity is one of the most significant in the world. India is one of the twelve mega biodiversity centers in the world and also an important center of origin of agrobiodiversity. It is therefore very important to study document and conserve the plant wealth of India and also of the world before its possible extinction. There are convincing scientific economic and sociological reasons for giving priority to the conservation of the major centers of plant diversity throughout the world. The strategies to conserve the biodiversity include establishment of protected area network and corridors with emphasis on appropriate levels of management reduction of anthropogenic pressure on natural populations by cultivating them elsewhere, programmes of augmentation, reintroduction and introduction of target taxa, restoration of degraded habitats etc. The conservation strategies can be either in situ conservation of genetic resources within their ecosystem and natural habitat or ex situ conservation of components of genetic material of biological diversity outside their natural habitat. The choice of conservation strategy depends upon the nature of the material to be conserved, i.e. the life cycle and mode of reproduction, size of individual population and ecological status. Ex situ techniques include the establishment of botanical and zoological gardens, banks of pollen, seed, tissue culture, DNA etc. Establishment of forest reserves, national parks, protected areas and on-farm conservation of valuable plant varieties is being promoted to facilitate their in situ conservation. Scientific and Technical Aerospace Reports, 1993. The steady growth in the number of vehicles on the road, heavy reliance on coal use, use of dirty fuels for residential combustion and extensive open burning are some of the major factors leading to the progressive deterioration of air quality in developing countries in Asia. And despite efforts to establish and implement air quality measurement systems, the development of infrastructure, environmental technology and management practices continues to lag behind the rate of emission increase. Based on ten years of coordinated research, Integrated Air Quality Management: Asian Case Studies discusses technical and policy tools for the integrated air quality management of developing countries in Asia. The book begins with an overview of major issues of air quality management practices in developing Asia and potential approaches to reduce pollution, including opportunities for integration of air quality improvement and climate migration strategies. It covers the methodology and results of fine particulate matter monitoring using traditional filter-based and satellite monitoring techniques. It examines the applications of a 3D dispersion modeling tool for urban and regional air quality management, focusing on surface ozone, fine particulate matter and acid deposition. The final chapters discuss innovative control technologies for gaseous air pollutants and illustrate the integrated air quality management in developing Asia through case studies for target source categories including agricultural residue field burning, vehicle emissions, brick kilns and industrial VOC emission. Illustrated with case studies, this book presents an integrated air quality management methodology that employs technical and policy tools to achieve air quality goals. It includes technical information and policy recommendations based on the outcomes of several multi-year air quality research programs coordinated by the Asian Institute of Technology. The text combines fundamental information and
