Addictive Behavior:

Changing Addictive Behavior Jalie A. Tucker, Dennis M. Donovan, G. Alan Marlatt, 2001-02-15 This volume proposes that prevailing clinical approaches to treating addictive behaviors are actually best suited to a minority of the population with problems in the case of substance abusers those with substantial functional impairment and physical dependence But what about persons with mild to moderate addictive behavior problems for whom intensive treatment may prove unnecessarily costly disruptive and stigmatizing Or those substance abusers who are unable or unmotivated to abstain but want to reduce the harm associated with drug use Contributors draw upon cutting edge theory and research to examine ways that traditional therapeutic treatments can be supplemented by public health interventions that extend the reach and effectiveness of care Timely and pragmatic the book points the way toward necessary evolutions in the roles of behavior change specialists in today's challenging health care environment Assessment of Addictive Behaviors Dennis M. M.A., 2015-04-01 The Behavioral Addictions provides a pragmatic and engaging guide to help clinicians understand and contextualize conditions that may not be clearly delineated in the DSM 5 diagnostic system Although not accorded a specific classification the behaviors addressed in this book share the accepted hallmarks of addiction continued engagement in an action despite negative consequences and loss of control over one's own life The editors begin with an overview of the behavioral addictions from neurobiological theoretical clinical and forensic perspectives and then present 12 case studies focused on a variety of behaviors from exercising to Internet gaming and from kleptomania to tanning These real life case studies are both fascinating and instructive and along with accompanying videos they help trainees and practicing clinicians alike to digest current research and gain hands on experience with the diagnosis and treatment of these conditions In the realm of behavioral addictions there is much work to be done figuring out reliable diagnostic criteria building useful assessment tools and developing effective psychosocial and pharmacological treatments to name a few critical tasks The Behavioral Addictions is an indispensable case based resource to guide clinicians in this rapidly changing field Choice, Behavioural Economics and Addiction Nick Heather, Rudy E. Vuchinich, 2003-11-13 Choice Behavioural Economics and Addiction is about the theory data and applied implications of choice based models of substance use and addiction The distinction between substance use and addiction is important because many individuals use substances but are not also addicted to them The behavioural economic perspective has made contributions to the analysis of both of these phenomena and while the major focus of the book is on theories of addiction it is necessary also to consider the behavioural economic account of substance use in order to place the theories in their proper context and provide full coverage of the contribution of behavioural economics to this field of study The book discusses the four major theories of addiction that have been developed in the area of economic science behavioural economics They are hyperbolic discounting melioration relative addiction rational addiction The main objective of the book is to popularise these ideas among addiction researchers academics and practitioners The specific aims are to articulate the shared and distinctive elements of these four theories to present and discuss the latest empirical work on substance abuse and addiction that is being conducted in this area and to articulate a range of applied implications of this body of work for clinical public health and public policy initiatives The book is based on an invitation only conference entitled Choice Behavioural Economics and Addiction Theory Evidence and Applications held at the University of Alabama at Birmingham March 30 April 1 2001 The conference was attended by prominent scientists and scholars representing a range of disciplines concerned with theories of addiction and their consequences for policy and practice The papers in the book are based on the papers given at the above conference together with commentaries by distinguished experts and in many cases replies to these comments by the presenters

Exploring Gender and Sex Differences in Behavioral Dyscontrol: from Drug Addiction to Impulse Control Disorders Liana Fattore, Miriam Melis, 2016-04-13 Males and females exhibit discrete attitudes and skills experience dissimilar emotional and psychological needs and react differently to peer pressure lack of self realization or other personal and social expectations In addition they are differently influenced by family history and diverge in the perception of self image and health risks To complicate the matter on gender dichotomy male testosterone levels markedly vary over the course of the day while female levels of sex hormones significantly fluctuate depending upon the menstrual cycle the pre or post menopausal age and the use of oral contraceptives All of these factors interact with genetic background and sex hormonal fluctuations and determine the differences observed in their predisposition to develop an addiction This term is traditionally associated to the abuse of legal and illegal substances However a compulsion toward the engagement in a non drug related rewarding behavior usually involving a natural reward also activates the brain reward system and engenders persistent behavior thus resulting in a diminished control over it These latter behaviors are defined as behavioral addictions This definition encompasses any behavior characterized by the followings i feeling of tension or arousal before the action ii gratification and or relief at the time of performing the act iii inability to resist an urge or drive even against great obstacles or dangers iv absence of consideration for the negative consequences that may affect family friends and or work As such behavioral addictions include compulsive food intake and sexual activity pathological gambling and Internet addiction excessive exercising compulsive buying and pyromania These behaviors which are often classified as impulse control disorders result in actions that are harmful to oneself and or others share common features e g compulsiveness impulsivity impaired decision making craving tolerance withdrawal high rates of relapse and involve dysfunction of several brain circuits Derangement from functional neurobiological mechanisms underpinning both sensitivity to reward and inhibitory control can also lead to compulsive behaviors For instance pathological gambling and other impulse control disorders e g hypersexuality compulsive painting eating and buying are often reported in Parkinson s disease patients Gender dependent differences in the rate of initiation and frequency of misuse of addicting drugs have been widely described Yet men and women also differ in their propensity to become addicted to other rewarding stimuli e g sex food or activities e g gambling exercising The goal of the present Research Topic is to explore and summarize current evidence for gender and sex differences not only in drug addiction but also in other forms of addictive behaviors Thus it will include studies showing gender dependent differences in drug addiction food addiction compulsive sexual activity pathological gambling Internet addiction and physical exercise addiction Psychiatric comorbidity potential risk factors and the underlying neural mechanisms will be also examined with particular emphasis to the role of sex hormones in modulating addictive and compulsive behaviors

Alternative Models of Addiction Hanna Pickard, Serge H. Ahmed, Bennett Foddy, 2015-12-07 For much of the 20th century theories of addictive behaviour and motivation were polarized between two models The first model viewed addiction as a moral failure for which addicts are rightly held responsible and judged accordingly The second model in contrast viewed addiction as a specific brain disease caused by neurobiological adaptations occurring in response to chronic drug or alcohol use and over which addicts have no choice or control. As our capacity to observe neurobiological phenomena improved, the second model became scientific orthodoxy, increasingly dominating addiction research and informing public understandings of addiction. More recently, however, a dissenting view has emerged within addiction research, based partly on new scientific research and partly on progress in philosophical and psychological understandings of relevant mental phenomena. This view does not revert to treating addiction as a moral failure but nonetheless holds that addictive behaviour is fundamentally motivated by choice and subject to at least a degree of voluntary control. On this alternative model of addiction, addictive behaviour is an instrumental means to ends that are desired by the individual, although much controversy exists with respect to the rationality or irrationality of these ends, the degree and nature of the voluntary control of addictive behaviour and motivation, the explanation of the difference between addictive and non-addictive behaviour and motivation, and lastly, the extent to which addictive behaviour and motivation is correctly characterised as pathological or diseased. This research topic includes papers in the traditions of neuroscience, psychology, philosophy, law, and social science that explore alternative understandings of addiction.
