Adolescent Parenthood Max Sugar, 2012-12-06 The definition of the risks of adolescent childbearing has received considerable investigative attention during the last decade We have gradually moved away from simplistically studying young maternal age as the sole determinant of biologic and psychosocial outcome even though we recognize it is one of several factors which warrant consideration We now recognize that if adolescents receive adequate and consistent pre natal care they and their infants should do nearly as well as adult women and their infants of similar backgrounds Thus the major morbidities for adolescent mothers adolescent fathers and their infants are psychosocial lack of educational and vocational futures failed marriages and dependence on government aid for support The adequacy of the parenting of adolescent mothers and fathers and the long term developmental and physical outcomes of their children are largely unstudied This book edited by Dr Max Sugar a recognized authority on adolescence focuses on the important topic of adolescent parenthood The authors of this timely contribution approach the topic of adolescent parenthood in a unique fashion utilizing a combination of several approaches consideration of fictional characters in history astute and carefully conceptualized clinical observations reviews of the literature and their own investigation It will be through the use of such a creative approach that we shall define the important questions which should be addressed about adolescents as parents and the outcome for their children

Teenage Fatherhood. Social Construction, Vulnerability and Societal Implication in Western Kenya Dina Were, Peter Gutwa Oino, 2020-06-25 Research Paper postgraduate from the year 2020 in the subject Sociology Relationships and Family course, social studies language English abstract While teen fatherhood falls outside the scope of traditional norms, values and expectations, it has become a serious social health problem in Africa and Kenya, in particular. Teen fathers are neglected by educational, social research and interventions, hence lacking in previous and current discourses on pregnancy, birth and childbearing, which has traditionally been viewed as a female affair. Drawing experiences from Western Kenya, in particular Kisii and Vihiga counties, the study sought to understand how teen fathers' and parents' perceptions and attitudes toward teen fathers influence vulnerability and policy implications in Kenya. The study used mixed research methodology to explore parents' and teen fathers' experiences and perceptions. The study used a questionnaire for data collection from the general population, interviews with parents and selected teen fathers. Data analysis was both qualitative and quantitative. The study found that teenage fathers are unacceptable in the society, deemed ignorant, careless, uncaring and social deviants. The study revealed that the majority of teen fathers were unable to meet parental obligations due to unemployment, lack of parenting knowledge due to age and educational obligation as most are still in school. The study concludes that becoming a teen father is a significant and critical life event manifesting developmental crisis. Teen fathers endure conflict of future role, accepting impending fatherhood and negative society perception towards them. The study recommends that interventions designed should consider incorporating teen fathers as a way of addressing their needs as well as mitigating against future teenage pregnancies. There is also a need to create awareness to families and communities on the need for social acceptance of teen fathers and mould the victims to adopt acceptable behaviour and be responsible in the society

Johnson Jr., 2010-05-26 This unique volume explicitly examines the contemporary status of African American males from adolescence to adulthood while implicitly challenging how normative masculine identity and historical marginalization complicate individual and familial engagement between social work social welfare and African American males Dimensions of Fatherhood Shirley M.
