Adopting an Abandoned Farm Escape to the Country By Kate Sanborn A country auction is not so exciting as one in the city still you must be wide awake and cool or you will be fleeced An experienced friend acquainted with the auctioneer piloted me through my first sale and for ten dollars I bought enough really valuable furniture to fill a large express wagon as a large desk with drawers little and big fascinating pigeon holes and a secret drawer for two dollars queer old table ten cents good solid chairs nine cents each mahogany center table one dollar and sixteen cents and best of all a tall and venerable clock for the landing only eight dollars Its innards sadly demoralized but capable of resuscitation the weights being tin cans filled with sand and attached by strong twine to the works It has to be wound twice daily and when the hour hand points to six and the other to ten I guess that it is about quarter past two and in five minutes I hear the senile timepiece strike eleven The scene was unique The sale had been advertised in post office and stores as beginning at 10 A M but at eleven the farmers and their women folks were driving toward the house A dozen old men chewing tobacco and looking wise were in the barn yard examining the stock to be sold the carts and farming tools a flock of hens were also to be disposed of at forty cents each Adopting an Abandoned Farm HardPress,Kate Sanborn,2013-01
