Adding Value To The Facility Acquisition:

Adding Value to the Facility Acquisition Process Standing Committee on Organizational Performance and Metrics, Federal Facilities Council, Ralph S. Spillinger, 2000-02-03 The federal government like private corporations and other organizations acquires buildings and other facilities to support specific functions and missions and the general conduct of its business The federal government is in fact the nation s largest owner of buildings and spends more than 20 billion per year for facility design and construction Adding Value to the Facility Acquisition Process identifies a range of best practices and technologies that can be used by federal agencies and other owners to provide adequate management and oversight of design reviews throughout the facility acquisition process Outsourcing Management Functions for the Acquisition of Federal Facilities National Research Council, Commission on Engineering and Technical Systems, Board on Infrastructure and the Constructed Environment, Committee on Outsourcing Design and Construction-Related Management Services for Federal Facilities, 2001-01-20 In this study outsourcing is defined as the organizational practice of contracting for services from an external entity while retaining control over assets and oversight of the services being outsourced In the 1980s a number of factors led to a renewed interest in outsourcing For private sector organizations outsourcing was identified as a strategic component of business process reengineering an effort to streamline an organization and increase its profitability In the public sector growing concern about the federal budget deficit the continuing long term fiscal crisis of some large cities and other factors accelerated the use of privatization measures including outsourcing for services as a means of increasing the efficiency of government Federal Facilities Council's report on the role of facility design reviews in facilities construction
