Adult Development Of Career Army Officers:

Assembly West Point Association of Graduates (Organization),1992 Parameters ,1994 The Adult Development of Career Army Officers Jeffrey McNally,1991-09-25 Although adult development recently has begun to receive increased attention from researchers current studies have been limited mainly to specific aspects of adult development and have not provided a clear view of the meaning of the whole of adult life Broadening this focus and at the same time concentrating on a specific occupational group Jeffrey A McNally presents the results of his three year study of successful career Army officers His inquiry which draws on Daniel Levinson s theory of adult development provides an analysis of the sequential patterns that characterize the development of the adult lives of successful career Army officers After reviewing Levinson s theory of how lives develop during adulthood McNally looks at the developmental and transitional periods experienced by the Army officers he studied from pre adulthood to their early forties The study examines the impact of living and working within a highly ordered systematic organizational structure such as the military upon the way in which these adult lives unfold The author finds that despite the unique aspects of a career in the military his subjects experienced similar patterns and sequences to those predicted by Levinson s theory of adult development Based on frequent wide ranging interviews over a three year period of time interviews which covered aspects of each subject s life from career to marriage children friends religion etc this work is the first to provide an in depth picture of the military officer s life A unique resource for the study of adult development and the profession of the military this book will be of special interest to military officers and those interested in adult development and developmental psychology Professional Journal of the United States Army ,1993

America's School for War Peter J. Schifferle,2010-04-05 When the United States entered World War II it took more than industrial might to transform its tiny army smaller than even Portugal s into an overseas fighting force of more than eight and a half million Peter Schifferle contends that the determination of American army officers to be prepared for the next big war was an essential component in America s ultimate triumph over its adversaries Crucial to that preparation were the army schools at Fort Leavenworth Interwar Army officers haunted by the bloodshed of World War I s Meuse Argonne Offensive fully expected to return to Europe to conclude the unfinished business of that conflict and they prepared well Schifferle examines for the first time precisely how they accomplished this through a close and illuminating look at the students faculty curriculum and essential methods of instruction at Fort Leavenworth He describes how the interwar officer corps there translated the experiences of World War I into effective doctrine engaged in intellectual debate on professional issues conducted experiments to determine the viability of new concepts and used military professional education courses to substitute for the experience of commanding properly organized and resourced units Schifferle highlights essential elements of war preparation that only the Fort Leavenworth education could provide including intensive instruction in general staff procedures hands on experience with the principles and techniques of combined arms and the handling of large division sized formations in combat This readied army officers for an emerging new era of global warfare and enabled them to develop the leadership decision making they would need to be successful on the battlefield But Schifferle offers more than a recitation of curriculum development through the skillful interweaving of personal stories about both school experiences and combat operations collectively recounting the human and professional development of the officer corps from 1918 to 1945 Well crafted and insightful Schifferle s meticulously researched study shows how and why the Fort Leavenworth experience was instrumental in producing that impressive contingent of military officers who led the U S Army to final victory in World War II By the end of the book the attentive reader will also fully comprehend why the military professionals at Fort Leavenworth have come to think of it as the Intellectual Center of the Army Military Review ,1993 Air University Library Index to Military Periodicals ,1994 Resources in Education ,2000-10 Manpower Planning and Organization Design Donald T. Bryant,Richard J. Niehaus,2013-03-09 This volume is the proceedings of the conference entitled Manpower Planning and Organization Design which was held in Stresa Italy 20 24 June 1977 The Conference was sponsored by the NATO Scientific Affairs Division and organized jointly through the Special Programs Panels on Human Factors and on Systems Science Two Conference Directors were appointed with overall responsibilities for the programme and for policy and they were assisted in their tasks by a small advisory panel consisting of Professor A Charnes University of Texas Professor W W Cooper Carnegie Mellon University now at Harvard University and Dr F A Heller TavistQck Institute of Human Relations Professor R Florio of Bergamo kindly agreed to become Administrative Director and as such was responsible for all the local arrangements The Conference Directors were further assisted by national points of contact appointed from each of the member countries of NATO These national representatives played a substantial part in the search for participants and in the collection and trans mission of the various conference communications Although full details of the national points of contact are included in the Appendices special tribute must be paid to the UK point of contact Brian Smith of the Civil Service Department He very capably shouldered the additional burdens of maintaining conti nuity and resolving problems during the absence in Canada of Don Bryant in the particularly demanding two months preceding the Conference
