

Childhood Vs. Adulthood

All the stages of life are important as to what makes a person human. Everyone experiences the challenges of growing up and living in the real world. There are good times and hard times. We learn from everything we go through and continue to grow every day at all ages. Many traits in adulthood like responsibilities, wealth, and social status matter to most, but as a child, the only things that matter are what they can dream to achieve one day. Though our childhood is a small part of our life, it impacts adulthood in so many ways. During childhood and adulthood, we make mistakes, learn lessons, and grow from them.

There are many traits that are similar and different between childhood and adulthood like independence, identity, and thoughts. Everyone talks about their childhood and how they grew to be themselves today. As a child, one feels they are independent when in reality, they are not. Children go to school but only because of their parents, they can make decisions only because it is too small to influence their life. There is not a responsibility serious enough that could shape themselves, or their lives later on because parents make sure they take care of it and protect them. As an adult, there is no avoiding independence. Adulthood is intimidating because there is not always someone to help you make decisions or direct you into the right path. Once one sees the real world and what it really entails, there is an understanding that one is truly on their own. Parents are there to guide their child every step of the way until they cannot anymore. There are benefits to both ends, with childhood there is no worry about the future because children have their parents to back them up. As an adult, they can make a decision and not have to worry about what anyone else says. With that, there are unfavorable things

Arrested Adulthood James E. Cote, 2000-07-01 An examination into the social influences that have prolonged youth in today's adults Why are today's adults more like adolescents in their dress and personal tastes than ever before Why do so many adults seem to drift and avoid responsibilities such as work and family As the traditional family breaks down and marriage and child rearing are delayed what makes a person an adult Many people in the industrial West are simply not growing up in the traditional sense Instead they pursue personal individual fulfillment and emerge from a vague and prolonged youth into a vague and insecure adulthood The transition to adulthood is becoming more hazardous and the destination is becoming more difficult to reach if it is reached at all Arrested Adulthood examines the variety of young people's responses to this new situation James E C t shows us adults who allow the profit driven industries of mass culture to provide the structure that is missing as their lives become more individualistic and atomized He also shows adults who resist anomie and build their world around their sense of personal connectedness to others Finally C t provides a vision of a truly progressive society in which all members can develop their potentials apart from the influence of the market In so doing he gives us a clearer vision of what it means to be an adult and makes sense of the longest but least understood period of the life course
