Down By The River Edna O'Brien,2014-01-30 Edna O'Brien is one of the greatest writers in the English speaking world New York Times Book Review In the deceptively idyllic setting of rural Ireland a crime of passion results in an emotional battlefield At the centre of the crisis a young girl struggles with the conflicts of mind and body the teaching of her faith and her mounting bewilderment at what she must do As she tries to conceal then escape her fate she finds herself driven to the brink of despair And then her private and redeemable tragedy is dragged into the public realm and the power of decision is taken out of her hands An angry violent yet startlingly beautiful book Independent on Sunday Taut and relentlessly powerful O'Brien describes the tug of war between religious zealots and the kindly legal figures brilliantly The story becomes grotesquely suspenseful and chilling Literary Review Extraordinary and gripping Down by the River is her most exciting and rewarding book by far Observer Down By the River Benjamin Gearey, Andy Howard, Henry Chapman, 2016-05-31 East Anglia has long been known for its internationally significant cultural and environmental Palaeolithic archaeology often overshadowing the potential of its Holocene resource This volume details the results of 8 years of palaeoenvironmental archaeological and geoarchaeological investigations focused on the post glacial history and evolution of the Suffolk river valleys funded by Historic England and a number of commercial developers The volume illustrates the largely untapped research potential of the region and provides information concerning the timing pattern and process of alluvial development landscape change and human activity The highlight of these investigations was the excavation and associated analyses of three well preserved later prehistoric timber alignments and their environmental records discovered during flood alleviation works on the floodplain of the lower Waveney Valley As well as documenting these internationally significant remains the research described includes innovative approaches to wetland archaeological and palaeoenvironmental study highlighting important methodological considerations with respect to radiocarbon dating and chronology applying novel geophysical approaches to site prospection and recording wooden artefacts using 3 D laser scanning The volume also discusses the results of groundwater monitoring of sediments containing the late prehistoric timber alignment at Beccles and considers the longer term preservation potential of these fragile remains which as with other wetland archaeological sites are at ever increasing risk from development pressures as well as the longer term impacts of climate and environmental change
