Airways Smooth Muscle David Raeburn, Mark A. Giembycz, 2013-03-09 Many factors may influence the release of neurotransmitters from airway nerves 1 This is likely to be important in physiological control of airway functions and may be particularly relevant in airway diseases such as asthma and chronic obstructive pulmonary disease COPD Neural elements in airways interact in a complex manner and the activation of certain neural pathways may profoundly influence the release of transmitters from other neural pathways Similarly inflammatory mediators released from inflammatory cells in the airways may also modulate neurotransmitter release There are marked differences between species in airway innervation and in neuromodulatory effects and wherever possible studies in human airways have been emphasised although information on neuromodulation in human airways is somewhat limited at present Release of neurotransmitters from nerve terminals occurs via a Ca²⁺ dependent secretion evoked by a nerve action potential but may also be evoked experimentally by a high extracellular K concentration which directly depolarises the nerve terminal membrane Modulation refers to the alteration of neurotransmitter release which may either be increased facilitation or reduced inhibition by the action of a particular agent thus changing the magnitude of the neurally mediated response Such agents would normally act on receptors on the nerve terminal which are referred to as pre junctional or presynaptic receptors in contrast to post junctional or post synaptic receptors located on the target cells which are influenced by that particular transmitter Airways Smooth Muscle:

Development, and Regulation of Contractility David Raeburn, Mark A. Giembycz, 2013-03-08 Most studies on autonomic innervation of smooth muscle have focused on the short term mechanisms involved in neurotransmission in physiological and pathophysiological conditions. However, recent observations of the long term plasticity of this system, i.e. its capacity for regeneration and for compensatory change in pattern of innervation and expression of cotransmitters and receptors in ageing following surgery, trauma or in disease, have indicated that an understanding of the mechanisms involved could influence the design of therapeutic regimes. There is increasing evidence for long term communication between nerves and smooth muscle cells during development and throughout adult life. To date, the trophic interactions between nerves and airway musculature have attracted little interest; consequently, much of the information presented here is drawn from studies using other smooth muscles. However, the questions posed about trophic interactions during development apply as much to airways smooth muscle neuroeffector systems as to other autonomic neuroeffector systems. These are: i) How do developing nerve fibres know where to go and how do they reach their target sites? ii) What determines the density and pattern of innervation at reaching the effector? iii) How do the nerves survive and maintain their position once established? iv) What factors influence neurochemical differentiation such that genetically multipotential neurones are triggered to synthesize one or combinations of neurotransmitters? v) What influence do nerves have on the structure, function and receptor expression of their effector cells? vi) How do diseases interrupt these processes? see 1
