of the Hevajra Tantra and its two explanatory tantras and is almost entirely concerned with esoteric tantric practice. The first topic however is the fundamental teachings of Hinayana and Mahayana Buddhism which are the essential basis for the main tantric practices of Vajrayana. In the Lamdr system this first topic of preliminary instructions is known as the Three Appearances. The second topic the main Vajrayana practices is known as the Three Continua. The preliminary practices presented in the first volume Ornament to Beautify the Three Appearances may be practiced by anyone without specific required preparation. The guiding instructions on impure appearance are for the purpose of developing renunciation and this volume focuses on three main topics the defects of samsara in order to produce renunciation the rarity benefit and transience of life as a human being in order to arouse diligence and the nature of positive and negative actions and results in order to understand what types of behavior to accept and reject. The guiding instructions on the appearance of the experiences are for the purpose of producing the altruistic intent. This section concerns two main topics meditation until the common experiences have arisen which focuses on cultivating love compassion and bodhicitta and cultivating joy now about the uncommon experiences that will arise later when practicing the Vajrayana teachings. The guiding instructions on pure appearance are for the purpose of producing enthusiasm for the ultimate result of complete awakening. This section briefly describes the inconceivable nature of a buddha's enlightened body speech and mind. The second volume explains the main tantric practices of the Three Continua. It is a restricted text intended only for students who have at least received the great initiation of Hevajra. It is the most extensive explanation of the Three Continua in a single text. These three are the causal continuum the abiding mode of phenomenon which involves meditation on the view of the indivisibility of samsara and nirvana for the purpose of eliminating all conceptual elaborations the method continuum the precise way to meditate the main practice of the Teaching the method for guiding the true nature of the mind primordially free of conceptual elaborations the ground of everything to the four kayas which involves instructions on each of the four initiations the various sacred commitments associated with the four initiations the propitiation of the kas and kins if these commitments have been damaged and the initiations at the time of the path which is the main topic of the method continuum and the resultant continuum buddhahood. Dependent on the causal continuum of the mind or universal ground which is like a field being purified by the method continuum of the body which is like water and manure the resultant continuum of mahamudra the four resultant kayas which is like the ripened fruit is actualized.
