Albert Oehlen:

Albert Oehlen Boxed Edition Klaus Kertess, Albert Oehlen, John Corbett, Roberto Ohrt, 2009 Limited to 1 000 copies each numbered and signed by the artist each signed by the artist Often wryly funny and just as smart Albert Oehlen's paintings play the medium for all it's worth After an early realization that the so called death of painting actually freed his enthusiasm as to the number of aspects through which one could expand painting Oehlen got to work on a wide variety of figurative and non objective offerings in what he has called his post non representational art In his most recent work group Oehlen expands painting through the use of blatant advertising posters whose in your face aesthetics he transforms with subtle brushwork Never without a touch of tongue in cheek humor his work seems to be winking at us as it dares us to change the way we look at an image Klaus Kertess throws a light on the years from 1988 onwards when Oehlen saw himself self consciously as a painter and started his first abstract works then continued to probe the limits of the medium Albert Oehlen Skarstedt, 2019-12 Albert Oehlen Massimiliano Gioni, Fredi Fischli, Niels Olsen, Mark Godfrey, Anne Pontégnie, 2015 Surveying the past thirty years of his career and demonstrating his immeasurable influence on contemporary painting Albert Oehlen Home and Garden comprises paintings drawings and prints from the artist's most important bodies of work From the beginning of his career Oehlen set himself the task of exploring the language structures and experiences of painting He has managed to reinvigorate the genres of portraiture collage and gestural abstraction in work that deploys a staggering range of imagery and techniques Oehlen's canvases capture haunting interiors mutating self portraits archaic and digital landscapes and cryptic fragments of language As a younger generation of artists turns again to painting as a critical medium Oehlen's work has only become more influential and prescient Albert Oehlen: Big Paintings by Me with Small Paintings by Others Francesca Benini, 2022-03 The artist as collector Albert Oehlen's own artworks nail to nail with masterpieces from his personal collection 00The dual role of artist collector is always an exciting coupling and when the artist collector is as elusive and discreet as Albert Oehlen it is downright seductive Albert Oehlen big paintings by me with small paintings by others published on the occasion of the homonymous exhibition at the MASI Lugano in 2021 witnesses Oehlen as an exhibited artist a curator and a collector For the first time in such an extensive form many of his own artworks are nail to nail with masterpieces from his collection He devised a precise exhibition path in close collaboration with Francesca Benini and Christian Dominguez and the catalogue reflects this precious dialogue The connections between Oehlen's and the artists in his collection speak for themselves readers will readily spot the many and various alignments in terms of their ideas about art and the big questions they seek to answer 00Exhibition MASILugano Switzerland 05 09 2021 20 02 2022 Albert Oehlen Whitechapel Art Gallery, 2006-01-01 Albert Oehlen - Painting Albert Oehlen, 2013 Four decades after he first burst onto the international art scene in the early 1980s Albert Oehlen born 1954 remains among the most influential and controversial painters of the present Operating between figuration and abstraction with vigor and energy Oehlen relentlessly critiques painting's history its clichés and its relationship to the imagery of the advertising and pop industries all within the medium itself rather than in another art form Reproducing 110 works this volume designed by Heimo Zobernig takes something of an artist's book approach to Oehlen's oeuvre emphasizing its methodological complexity vitality and conflicts Alongside an interview between Oehlen and fellow painter Daniel Richter this catalogue contains conversations on the implications of Oehlen's work between Rochelle Feinstein and Kerstin Stakemeier and between Hal Foster and Achim Höchd rfer

Albert Oehlen Albert Oehlen, 2008 Continuing Albert Oehlen's interest in posters this volume contains loose unbound images of ten paintings contained within a large fold out poster set designed by the artist Closely associated with the Cologne art scene and the Neue Wilde movement Oehlen was also formally a member of the Lord Jim Lodge along with Martin Kippenberger among others The artist's latest series of paintings vividly merge image text and symbol in an explosive form that Oehlen has called free collage Combining oil inkjet print collage and spraypaint on canvas Oehlen's paintings are characterised by dirty smears at their centre reflecting the artist's ability to interrogate the possibilities of painting and challenge the viewer's reading of visual language
