Recent Developments in Alcoholism Marc

Galanter, 2013-11-22 From the President of the Research Society on Alcoholism In recent years increasingly convincing evidence in support of a biobehavioral conceptual model of the etiology of alcoholism has emerged In this model the disorder is perceived as arising from the interaction of genetic/biological vulnerability and psychosocial risk Drinking or alcohol seeking is a metric trait Alcoholism which is a state of abnormally intense alcohol seeking behavior that over time leads to the alcohol dependence syndrome lies at the extreme high end of this quantitative measure Metric traits are influenced by multiple genes the extent of genetic loading of biological risk for alcoholism would be different in different individuals Added to this kind of variability is the wide range of options for exposure to the psychosocial risk factors of heavy drinking provided by modern society Further environmental provocation also changes when life events change It is not surprising therefore from the combination of the kinds of genetic and environmental variability described above that there is a wide array of patterns of expression of the disorder alcoholism referred to by some as alcoholisms In the search for understanding of underlying mechanisms and rational bases for potential therapy it is important to focus our attention on the final common pathway of this disorder alcohol seeking behavior This series ever since its beginning in 1983 has been sensitive to the complexities of the interaction between biological and psychosocial risk factors in alcoholism

Responding to Drinking Problems Stan Shaw, Alan Cartwright, Terry Spratley, Judith Harwin, 2023-12-01 In the 1970s family doctors social workers researchers and administrators had been aware of the inadequacy of the response to drinking problems for some time However there had been no systematic examination of why such agents felt negatively about drinkers and disinclined to respond to them Originally published in 1978 this book develops a radical new perspective on the prevalence and causes of drinking problems combining reviews of historical and contemporary literature with the authors own research studies This perspective is then linked to the need for an integrated response from both medical and social services with a particular accent on the need for a community response By focusing on the relationship between helper and helped a solution is sought to the question which has troubled the field for many years why are agents like family doctors and social workers so inadequate in recognising and responding to people with drinking problems The crucial aspects within the therapeutic relationship are pinpointed and experimental studies are described which show how training casework supervision and the redeployment of expertise can help improve recognition rates and responses to individual drinkers This book thus expresses the need for major changes both in our attitudes and understanding of people with drinking problems and the difficulties of agents who try to help them It should still be of historical interest to social scientists and those involved in helping people with drinking problems
