The Airspeed AS.52 Horsa glider was a British World War II troop-carrying glider designed by Airspeed Limited and was used by British and Allied forces. British gliders were all bad names starting with H, the name Horsa came from the legendary 5th century conqueror of Southern Britain.

The aircraft was built with a wooden semi-monocoque fuselage built in three sections that were bolted together. The front section consisted of the cockpit and main freight loading door, the main section accommodated up to 18 troops or freight and the rear section supported the tail assembly. The wing had large "Burn Doors" flaps which allowed steep approaches and were actuated by a small air bottle, but could only be deployed once. This allowed the aircraft land in confined spaces. The fusible undercarriage was fixed and could be jettisoned after take off, although if often was not. If jettisoned, the aircraft landed on a spring steel under the fuselage.

The aircraft first flew on 12th September 1942 with a total of 1,650 being built by Airspeed, Austin Motors and furniture manufacturers Morris Lubell.

The Horsa was first used operationally on the night of 16/17th September 1942 on Operation Freshwater, a raid on the German Heavy Water plant in Norway. The next use was on 10th July 1943 on Operation Husky, the invasion of Sicily but the most famous use was during Operation Tonga, the paratrooper operation of 6th July including the capture of Pegasus Bridge. Other operations included Operation Dragoon, the invasion of Southern France, Operation Market Garden, Ardennes and Operation Varsity, the crossing of the Rhine.

The Horsa was flown by a number of different aircraft types, including Alouettes, Dakota, Halifax, Stirling and Whitley's.

Concepts Division, 1962 Aircraft of World War II Les Perera, 2020-08-27 It is generally accepted that the Spitfire was not only a great fighter aircraft but was also a symbol of Britain's defiance of the Luftwaffe in the early years of WWII Britain had been slow to react to German rearmament in the 1930s Since WWI the RAF's front line aircraft were mainly used in the colonial policing role where their mostly 1920s technology was not an issue However the political appeasement of Hitler's Germany and subsequent lack of realisation had left the RAF ill equipped to combat the potential threat posed by the German build up Almost too late the government started to modernise Britain's ageing fighter force with orders for the Hurricane and Spitfire that were to prove invaluable in the defence of the country These aircraft together with others to follow began to replace the biplane fighters and bombers that would have been hopelessly outclassed in the forthcoming war Weapons technology radar and electronic countermeasures all played a part in Britain's ultimate victory Without the aircraft and the courage of the crews who operated them this outcome would not have been possible Some of the aircraft that served during that period are profiled in this illustrated book with archive photography There are many familiar names featured such as the Supermarine Spitfire Hawker Hurricane and Avro Lancaster but also lesser known types including the Boulton Paul Defiant Fairey Battle and Westland Lysander Leading the Way to Victory Mark C.
