Albania In Transition:

Albania in Transition?, 1990 Albania In Transition Elez Biberaj, 1999-05-14 In early 1997 Albania's transition to democracy suffered a serious setback when pyramid schemes sparked violent unrest plunging the country into its worst political and economic crisis since the downfall of communism. The uprisings and subsequent elections in which the Socialist Party won a landslide victory have made front page news in the international community. And Albania's proximity to the Yugoslavian melee and history of extreme radical communism make it a nation to watch. In Albania in Transition Elez Biberaj provides a comprehensive political profile of Albania since 1989. He charts Albania's transition from one party to many from a command economy to a market economy and its transition to a national security state in an unpredictable post Cold War international security regime.

Albania in Transition Elez Biberaj, 2019-08-28 In early 1997 Albania's transition to democracy suffered a serious setback when pyramid schemes sparked violent unrest plunging the country into its worst political and economic crisis since the downfall of communism. The uprisings and subsequent elections in which the Socialist Party won a landslide victory have made front page news in the int.

Albania Gloria La Cava, Raffaella Nanetti, 2000-01-01 During Albania's transition from a centralized economy to one anchored in a body of Western laws, deep social unrest, widespread poverty, uncontrolled migration, and the reemergence of clan-based loyalties have led to an increase in the most vulnerable population groups. These groups are more likely to be marginalized by the economic cycle, thus making it more difficult to ensure a successful transition. One purpose of the study is to identify key emerging social issues and problems in Albania and determine their causes. However, the main purpose of this report is to propose a short to medium term action strategy to guide and connect social policy and assistance initiatives targeted to the vulnerable groups in areas where they are most numerous through a bottom up approach.

The Foreign Policy of Albania in Transition Astrit Zharri, 2012-02 Albanian foreign policy has been shaped by the powerful few during the communist regime. In the late 80s Albania reversed its foreign policy and established relations with many non Communist countries. Albania's foreign policy aim has been to build a stable democracy, develop and maintain regional cooperation, and attain economic and political stability. Its foreign Policy focused on developing and strengthening bilateral relations with strategic important partners like the US, EU member countries. Albanian foreign policy towards its neighbours derives from its desire to build good relations and mutual trust. Albanian diplomacy made every possible effort to support international recognition of Kosovo, therefore making diplomatic recognition an instrument supporting irredentist plans and to consider the definition of the status of Kosovo an important issue.

Albania, the Transition from a Command to a Free Market Economy Gramoz Pashko, 1994 On Eagle's Wings Dirk J. Bezemer, 2006 This book is a contribution by a diverse group of authors from the academic, business, and policy advice communities to our understanding of recent social and economic developments in Albania. The motivation for this book is that there are lessons of wider importance to be learnt from the fascinating story of recent Albanian developments. Michael Kaser opens the book with a recounting of the country's history and political economy before and during transition. He brings to the job nearly six decades of professional experience as a diplomat and academic and an intimate knowledge of Albania. This chapter provides a detailed political history during transition up to late 2004. Dirk Bezemer contributes an analysis of the collapse in early 1997 of the economy and society brought about by Ponzi schemes. He links the lack of productivity growth and the growth of a virtual financial sector to policy practice focusing on macro stability and state abstinence from interfering in sectoral issues, policies which are still common in many transition and developing economies. Albania has implemented tight monetary policy, stabilised the exchange rate, implemented prudent fiscal policies and achieved a significant reduction in domestic borrowing, all contributing to the decline of the overall deficit. Based on his expertise as an IMF analyst, Treichel discusses Albania's macroeconomic prospects. Nevila Konica documents the large Albanian emigration flows during transition, leading to an estimated ten percent of the population working outside Albanian territory. Based on her large primary survey data set, she explores personal attributes that characterise emigrants as well as the extent of the brain drain. She finds that remittances from emigration have been vitally important to Albania's economy by contributing to household incomes and reducing domestic unemployment. Klarita Gerxhani delves deeper into the nature of the informal economy and presents key insights from her original academic research based on fieldwork in Tirana. In her study of the street vending sector, she traces its emergence to clear push and pull factors, emigration issue in the broader context of labour market developments. They analyse the large regional differences in unemployment rate, the large share of long term unemployment and the persistently higher than average unemployment rate and falling participation rate for women. They also conclude that emigration reduced the pressure of unemployment in the labour market and on the government's budget and contributed to financing imports, consumption and investments through remittances. Gloria La Cava uses her research experience as World Bank Senior Social Scientist specialising in the region to address jointly with co-author Rafaella Nanetti the changing socio-economic conditions that Albanians face. They focus on the nature of people's vulnerability resulting from a loss of social support during the transformation years and on social programs addressing new needs. World Bank analyst Malcolm Childress discusses the unfinished business of land and property reform in Albania, emergence of a dynamic land market and the sustained supply response which was expected. Urban property privatisation has fostered a construction boom in Tirana and along the coast and the creation of large areas of informal settlement on the outskirts of Tirana and Durres. Childress provides an insightful discussion of possible consequences. In the final chapter on agriculture, Pasquale Pazienza highlights key problems of land fragmentation and under investment, particularly in the irrigation system, illuminating the current situation with the post-war history of agricultural and land reforms. He explores the determinants of productivity in a production function framework, taking a long term view and draws out implications for what is still the largest sector in Albania's economy.
