Battle 2000 (1982 Version with Functional Areas). ,1982 This document provides the expanded Airland Battle 2000 concept It is based on the initial document dated 4 September 1981 which provided the concept overview and eight functional area concept statements The first part of this report is an unclassified updated version of the original overview No substantive changes have been made except to remove the classified portions for ease of handling by those interested in the data contained in the functional areas The functional area concepts were produced by combining the written reports of the TRADOC proponent task forces and the scripts developed for presentation of the concepts by the task force leaders at the AUSA Symposium held at Carlisle Barracks in May 1982 The document is in the structured writing style to emphasize key points Printed copies of the more pertinent slides from the Airland Battle 2000 briefing have been incorporated as visual stimuli to assist all who have heard the briefing A separate annex for aviation has been added During the final stages of development of the functional areas the aviation aspects of Airland Battle 2000 were too transparent and needed to be set out separately

Postmodern War Chris Hables Gray,2013-11-12 Postmodern War poses an urgent challenge to the ways we conceptualize and actually wage war in our high technology age Computerization and artificial intelligence have brought about a revolution in warfare spawning both increasingly powerful weapons and a rhetoric which disguises their apocalyptic potential in catch phrases like smart weapons and bloodless combat Postmodern War examines contemporary practices of war defining and critiquing trendy military doctrines hidden behind phrases like Infowar and Cyberwar the roles of those who manipulate high technology those who are manipulated by it and those who are increasingly merging with it the role of peace activists and socially responsible scientists in countering dangerous assumptions made by a postmodern military Far from opposing technological change however Gray finds new hopes for peace in the twenty first century Provocative and far reaching in its scope the book argues that postmodern war has left us poised between the most dreadful and most utopian of alternatives we may eradicate either the human race or war itself
