Measuring Empowerment Deepa Narayan-Parker, 2005-01-01 Large scale poverty reduction depends on the effective empowerment of poor people themselves This publication sets out a conceptual framework that can be used to monitor and evaluate empowerment programmes based on papers written by practitioners and researchers in a wide variety of fields including economics and political science sociology and psychology anthropology and demography These papers draw on research and practical experience at different levels from households to communities to nations and in various regions of the world

Empowerment John Friedmann, 1992-07-27 Two thirds of the population of the world are poor and their number is growing in the first as well as in the third world despite billions of dollars of aid The economic development policies of the last two decades and the theory which gave rise to them have been discredited The rich are disillusioned apprehensive or uninterested while the poor are embittered and without hope the victims and agents of ignorance instability and environmental degradation The need for radical rethinking is urgent this book makes an important contribution towards that end John Friedmann argues that poverty should be seen not merely in material terms but as social political and psychological powerlessness He presents the case for an alternative development committed to empowering the poor in their own communities and to mobilizing them for political participation on a wider scale In contrast to centralized development policies devised and implemented at the national and international level alternative development restores the initiative to those in need on the grounds that unless people have an active role in directing their own destinies long term progress will not be achieved The author takes the household as the strategic starting point stressing its moral political and economic potential as a source of continuity and as a location for production From this basis he propounds a politics of emancipation that would enable the disempowered poor to assert their rights Empowerment provides a morally informed theoretical framework for a development policy that meets the needs of its recipients rather than of its makers status and persistent gender gaps in health and education in South Asia contribute to chronic child malnutrition Smith et al 2003 and food insecurity von Grebmer et al 2009 even as other determinants of food security such as per capita incomes have improved This is particularly relevant for Bangladesh where chronic food insecurity continues to be an important issue despite steady advances in food production To be able to leverage agriculture as an engine of inclusive growth there is a need to develop indicators for measuring women s empowerment examine its relationship to various food security outcomes and monitor the impact of interventions to empower women Using nationally representative survey data from Bangladesh we examine the relationship between women s empowerment in agriculture and two measures of household food security per adult equivalent calorie availability and dietary diversity We use the Women s Empowerment in Agriculture Index to assess the extent of women s empowerment in agriculture and instrumental variables techniques to correct for the potential endogeneity of empowerment We find that the overall women s empowerment score the number of groups in which women actively participate women s control of assets and a narrowing gap in empowerment between men and women within households are positively associated with calorie availability and dietary diversity
