Outcome 1: Define and explain key concepts and apply related mathematical techniques and models in routine contexts

Outcome 2: Apply mathematical processes in non-routine contexts, including situations with some open-ended aspects requiring investigative, modelling or problemsolving techniques or approaches, and analyse and discuss these applications of mathematics.

Outcome 3: Apply computational thinking and use numerical, graphical, symbolic and statistical functionalities of technology to develop mathematical ideas, produce results and carry out analysis in situations requiring investigative, modelling or problem-solving techniques or approaches.

Each outcome is represented in both SACs and classwork so it is important that classwork is completed throughout the course of the year and that your teacher can authenticate your classwork to demonstrate these outcomes.

Students will be required to have their exercises checked and marked off at the end of each section. Each SAC will be graded and given a percentage. Please note that SACs are not returned to students but each student will be informed of their grade and will see their SAC after moderation has occurred.

However, most of the writing for that handbook was done in 1995 and generally reflected the main research and development foci prior to 1994. There were four sections, 36 chapters, and some 150 people contributed to the final volume either as author, reviewer, editor, or critical friend. The task was a monumental one attempting to cover the major research and practice developments in the international field of mathematics education as it appeared to the contributors in 1995. Inevitably, there were certain omissions; some developments were only starting to emerge, and some literatures were only sketchy and speculative. However, that Handbook has had to be reprinted three times, so it clearly fulfilled a need, and I personally hope that it lived up to what I wrote in its Introduction. The Handbook thus attempts not merely to present a description of the international state of the field but also to offer synthetic and reflective overviews on the different directions being taken by the field, on the gaps existing in our present knowledge, on the current problems being faced, and on the future possibilities for development. Bishop et al., 1996. Since that time, there has been even more activity in our field, and now seems a good time to take stock again to reflect on what has happened since 1995 and to create a second Handbook with the same overall goals.
