

Accounting for Changing Prices

Changing prices can seriously erode the value of a business and at the same time income can become distorted.

Important when inflation is high and in times of asset value appreciation.

The difference between reported values in accounts and their 'real' values can raise questions such as:

1. "Is there any meaningful interpretation of accounts?"
2. "How does a business protect its capital basis?"

Revenue reserve - profit and losses, this is the only reserve a company can withdraw from the business, e.g. dividends.

Inflation is measured by:

1. RPI - Retail Price Index
 2. CPI - Consumer Price Index
 3. CPIH - Consumer Price Inflation
- A basket of goods is measured as a representative of the inflation, this is constantly evolving, for example envelopes are not included in the metaphorical basket and smart speakers are now included

For an individual = "the maximum value which he can consume during a week and still expect to be as well off at the end of the week as he was at the beginning."

For a company = "the maximum value which the company can distribute during the year and still expect to be as well off at the end of the year as it was at the beginning."

Capital can be defined as:

HCA = Money Capital, Maintain cash value of shareholders' investment

CPP = Real Capital, Maintain purchasing power of shareholders' investment

CVA (RCA) = physical capital, Maintain operating capacity of business

Financial Capital Maintenance

- Primarily concerned with monetary evidence
- Particularly net assets
- Based upon actual cost such as actual pounds in the UK as for Historical Costs, or as actual pounds adjusted for inflation as required for Current Purchasing Power.

Physical Capital Maintenance

- Concerned with the capacity to maintain productivity
- Asks the question: "Can the business still produce the same amount of goods / services at the end of the period as it could at the start?"
