Alley Bay Bridge David Sandstrom, It was a time before time a time before creation before the physical realms came to be when all was immaterial and light and darkness which was the abyss worked together The abyss knew its place for The Great Light had created it to disperse of all of the unwanted words of creation Out of the depths of the abyss spiraled great lights here all of creation abounded and all was light within the light was harmony and peace and man dwelled within this light himself made from the light So it was the beginning play and work was a labor of love for the lights that dwelled within it they danced to and fro laboring always spinning new creation of lights from the nothingness weaving new worlds and capturing the imagination of The Great Lights and all around them time stood still The Great Light saw the minute subtleties and miniscule changes which the lesser lights did not see in the mediums or maybe choose to ignore as they were the workers of this magnificent enterprise this venture of eternity and they depended on The Great Light for all sustenance and protection They could not fail for they dwell within the one who is omnipotent who would never let fear overcome them which they could not even imagine at this time for fear was unbeknownst to them The lesser emotions hatred anger envy and many more had not yet infected the minds of these beings and time not known was as well Death was nonexistent for The Great Light had not given it a thought He was all and they were all within him and so life churned multiplying and fusing its great powers within the depths of The Great Light and creation hummed as they populated the great abyss and life as they knew it expanded occupying the darkness growing in comparison to the chasm and the dark chasm groaned in agony Millions were born in a measurement of time that did not exist only to join with each other where two became one thus forming the newly created smaller beings lights
