currently faces an unprecedented set of challenges The increasing importance of countries in Asia Latin America and Africa in international trade relations the revealed preference towards regionalism intensification of trade conflicts the role of business groups and NGOs in trade policy formation and negotiations and pressures for more leadership in an institution threatened by paralysis are examples of issues that are discussed in some detail all are critical for the operation of the system and for international business in the coming decade This edition also includes numerous real world examples to illustrate how the WTO impinges on business workers and households written from the perspective of managers and business associations An insider s view of the institutional history of the WTO allows the authors to use a variety of conceptual tools to analyse the working of the WTO in a non technical manner Suggestions for Further Reading at the end of each chapter and an extensive bibliography make the volume suitable both for introductory and postgraduate courses on international economics and business international relations and international economic law

Interoperating Geographic Information Systems Michael Goodchild, Max J. Egenhofer, Robin Fegeas, Cliff

Kottman, 1999-02-28 Geographic information systems have developed rapidly in the past decade and are now a major class of software with applications that include infrastructure maintenance resource management agriculture Earth science and planning But a lack of standards has led to a general inability for one GIS to interoperate with another It is difficult for one GIS to share data with another or for people trained on one system to adapt easily to the commands and user interface of another Failure to interoperate is a problem at many levels ranging from the purely technical to the semantic and the institutional Interoperating Geographic Information Systems is about efforts to improve the ability of GISs to interoperate and has been assembled through a collaboration between academic researchers and the software vendor community under the auspices of the US National Center for Geographic Information and Analysis and the Open GIS Consortium Inc It includes chapters on the basic principles and the various conceptual frameworks that the research community has developed to think about the problem Other chapters review a wide range of applications and the experiences of the authors in trying to achieve interoperability at a practical level Interoperability opens enormous potential for new ways of using GIS and new mechanisms for exchanging data and these are covered in chapters on information marketplaces with special reference to geographic information Institutional arrangements are also likely to be profoundly affected by the trend towards interoperable systems and nowhere is the impact of interoperability more likely to cause fundamental change than in education as educators address the needs of a new generation of GIS users with access to a new generation of tools The book concludes with a series of chapters on education and institutional change Interoperating Geographic Information Systems is suitable as a secondary text for graduate level courses in computer science geography spatial databases and interoperability and as a reference for researchers and practitioners in industry commerce and government
