

ACCOUNTABLE LEADERSHIP

Tips

1

Establish Trust

As the leader, your role is to create an environment for accountability to thrive, and the underlying factor in your success is trust.

ASK YOURSELF:

Do you trust your team to get the job done? Do they trust you enough to ask for help when needed?

2

Share the Big Picture

If you haven't clearly communicated the common purpose, your team may not understand why you are asking them to do something.

ASK YOURSELF:

Do I pause at the beginning of each new project to share why it matters?

3

Be Clear about Expectations

You can't hope for your team to succeed if you haven't defined success for them. Clarify expectations upfront to avoid surprises.

ASK YOURSELF:

Do I specify what success and failure look like for everything we do?

4

Communicate Effectively

Sharing your message about common purpose and clear expectations isn't enough. You have to ensure that message is received.

ASK YOURSELF:

When I communicate, do I verify that the team has understood?

5

Provide Coaching

Share feedback and coach your team along the way. Collaborate with them on solutions and act as a resource when needed.

ASK YOURSELF:

Do I listen and ask questions or jump in and solve problems myself?

6

Follow Up

Celebrate when the team succeeds and follow up with negative consequences when needed. Make a habit of sharing bright spots and lessons learned as a team.

ASK YOURSELF:

Do I enforce consequences – positive or negative?
