Accounting For Sustainable Forestry Management A Case Study:

Accounting for Sustainable Forestry Management United Nations Conference on Trade and Development, 1994

Sustainable Forest Management in a Changing World: a European Perspective Peter Spathelf, 2009-12-04 Yet another book on the topic of Sustainable Forest Management can only be justified by new information that is of direct relevance. The contents of this volume concentrate on the very latest factors and developments thus hopefully contributing both to the book's attractiveness and to closing gaps in the discipline's database. This book is written for researchers in the field of forest management, international forestry and climate change related issues, legal and policy advisors as well as for managers of private companies who deal with SFM. The authors of the various sections are scientists in the field of forestry and other environmental sciences. They represent different institutions, mainly universities and research agencies in Germany but also high level international institutions in development co-operation such as the World Bank, FAO and IIASA. The scope of the book is to refresh the meanings and perceptions of SFM against the background of the rapid changes in our natural and social environment. Climate change and the rapid increase of atmospheric CO₂ concentration is a global process with negative impacts of different kinds among others on natural ecosystems such as forests. A crucial issue therefore is how forest management can contribute to forest conservation in light of changing climatic conditions. Moreover, policy changes such as the introduction of certification schemes and the new emphasis laid on Non Wood Forest Products justify the re-evaluation of the role of SFM in delivering ecological goods and services from our forests. International Accounting and Reporting Issues, 2000

Monitoring Environmental Progress, 1995-01-01 Annotation: Showcases improvements in environmentally sustainable development indicators by using them to analyze policy oriented issues. The World Bank is both a compiler and a user of environmentally sustainable development (ESD) indicators. Although the Bank is more a user than a compiler of indicators in general, it believes in ensuring proper communication between users and compilers, especially for users who are policymakers. It is essential that policymakers have at least rough indicators of whether environmental conditions are improving or deteriorating in broad areas of concern. This report showcases improvements in ESD indicators by using them to analyze policy oriented issues. The report examines issues in developing indicators that are understood by compilers and users, including definitions, methodology and practical considerations. It addresses the gray area where physical indicators of environmental conditions blend into policymaking and proposes a change in the role of national accounting where poor measurement of environmental aspects can send distorted signals to decisionmakers. Sustainable Forest Management Julio J. Diez, Jorge Martín García, 2012-05-23 Sustainable forest management (SFM) is not a new concept. However, its popularity has increased in the last few decades because of public concern about the dramatic decrease in forest resources. The implementation of SFM is generally achieved using criteria and indicators. C The Carpathians: Integrating Nature and Society Towards Sustainability Jacek Kozak, Katarzyna Ostapowicz, Andrzej Bytnerowicz, Bartłomiej

Wyżga,2013-04-15 The book includes a broad spectrum of perspectives from different scientific disciplines both the natural and social sciences as well as practical knowledge It gives a new insight into the Carpathian mountain region

Foreign Direct Investment and Development United Nations Conference on Trade and Development,1999 This paper provides broader economic underpinnings for the specific issues relating to international discussions or negotiations on investment It starts with a discussion of the effects of foreign direct investment on development through trade one third of which takes place within corporate production systems Then it explores its impact on development beyond trade By its nature foreign direct investment brings into the recipient economy resources that are only imperfectly tradable on markets especially technology management know how skilled labor access to international production networks access to major markets and established brand names The effects of foreign direct investment on development often depend on the initial conditions prevailing in the recipient countries on the investment strategies of transnational corporations and on host government policies Publisher s description

Forestry for a low-carbon future Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations,2016 Forests are critical to mitigation having a dual role they function globally as a carbon sink but are also responsible for about 10 to 12 percent of global emissions Forests and forest products offer both developing and developing countries with a wide range of options for timely and cost effective mitigation Afforestation reforestation offers the best option because of its short timescale and ease of implementation Reducing deforestation especially due to the possibility for immediate action Yet forest contributions to mitigation Wood products and wood energy can replace fossil intense products in other sectors creating a virtuous cycle towards low carbon economies The mitigation potential and costs of the various options differ greatly by activity region system boundaries and time horizon Policymakers must decide on the optimal mix of options adapted to local circumstances for meeting national climate change and development goals This publication assesses the options and highlights the enabling conditions opportunities and potential bottlenecks It will be supported by policymakers investors and investors in their climate strategies This publication assesses the options and highlights the enabling conditions opportunities and potential bottlenecks It will be supported by policymakers investors and investors in their climate strategies This publication assesses the options and highlights the enabling conditions opportunities and potential bottlenecks It will be supported by policymakers investors and investors in their climate strategies

Forest Certification Daniel J Vogt,Bruce C Larson,John C Gordon,Anna Fanzeres,1999-11-29 Forest certification has been widely accepted as a tool that would encourage industrial and non industrial management of resources in an environmentally acceptable socially beneficial and economically viable manner Much has been written on certification yet five issues have been missing which this book addresses an analysis of the scientific basis for the certification standards a formal and mechanistic incorporation of social and natural system sustainability as part of the standards the rationale for the different sets of standards that are currently being used to certify governmental industrial and non industrial organizations the success of the different sets of standards in assessing the environmental acceptability social benefits and economic viability of the managed system and the difficulty of certifying small landowners with current protocols Forest Certification examines the historical roots of forest certification the factors that guide the development of certification protocols the players involved in certification the factors determining the customers to be certified and the benefits of certification The book also covers the terminology and other issues intrinsic to certification that direct the structure of standards the similarities between indicators of different human disturbances within the ecosystem landscape and certification standards and finally a case study evaluating the strengths and weaknesses of existing certification protocols Forest Certification is unique in its analysis of the scientific basis for the structure of the forest certification protocols It documents the roles of human values in the development of assessment protocols but demonstrates how elements of existing protocols should be used to produce non value based standards
