2021 Guangzhou Huashang College Youth Academic Project "Exchange Regulatory Inquiry Letter and Auditor Risk Control" (Grant No: 2021HSQX07)

Construction of experimental class of excellent auditing talents HS2022ZLGC15

Abstract

The assessment of material misstatement risk is a critical judgmental matter for CPAs, but the uncertainty and subjectivity of judgment lead to a qualitative description of risk evaluation. By sorting out the inquiry letters issued by stock exchanges to listed companies in recent years, constructing a material misstatement risk system using fault trees and quantifying them using fuzzy hierarchical synthesis analysis, this paper not only provides a new reference basis and new audit ideas for annual audits, but also helps CPAs to better identify and evaluate material misstatement risks and improve the effectiveness of audits during annual audits.

Keywords: material misstatement risk, query letter, fuzzy hierarchy analysis

1. Introduction

Chinese government departments pointed out "innovative supervision" and put the active prevention and resolution of risks in the first place in the three major battles, especially the role of front-line supervision of exchanges as an important measure to fill the shortcomings of capital market supervision. In addition, the Chinese government departments proposed to improve the national security system, strategic system as well as the risk monitoring and early warning system. The new non-administrative regulation represented by the inquiry letter, which was added to the regulatory system in 2013, has become one of the important tools of the regulatory mechanism as an innovative way of supervision by the Securities and Exchange Commission. As a "soft supervision" tool, the inquiry letter system requires listed companies to provide explanations on relevant matters, alleviating the problem of information asymmetry and enhancing the information efficiency of the market (Wenjing Xu, 2022). The letter of questioning revolves around questions that are not yet serious, and to a certain extent hits the pain points of the company (Haibo Yang, 2018). Questioned firms generally also require CPAs to answer questions, and firms being questioned already indicate that the firm has potential risks (Yueling Zhang, 2022), and the auditor will increase the audit fee to compensate for the risks. The questioned companies often have shortcomings in information disclosure, corporate governance, etc. (Shuo Chen, 2018), and companies that receive questioning letters often have the risk of material misstatement, and how the auditor can reasonably apply this information when taking on business, determining fees, and risk assessment is an issue worth studying.

Mingzeng Yang suggested that using the anchoring effect can improve the efficiency of auditor's audit judgment (Yang et al., 2007). Hong Yin tries to use the previous annual report and its inquiry letter as an "anchor" to assess the risk of the audited entity in an uncertain environment (Yin et al., 2019). Based on the above research, this paper constructs a fault tree for assessing the risk of material misstatement using the questionnaire as the "anchor" and quantifies the risk of material misstatement using fuzzy hierarchical analysis, starting from the anchoring effect theory, thus providing supplementary assistance to CPAs during the annual audit.

The chapters of this paper are organized as follows: Chapter 1 analyzes the factors affecting the risk of material misstatement using the pharmaceutical industry's 2019 to 2021 inquiry function as a case study; Chapter 2
