Governance as a Dialogue: Government-Society-Science in Transition Anthony R. Turton, Johanna Hanlie Hattingh, Gillian A. Maree, Dirk J. Roux, Marius Claassen, Wilma F. Strydom, 2007-02-16. The last two decades have been marked by a dramatic increase in global attention to the concept of governance, especially in relation to the effective and sustainable management of natural resources. During this period, issues of water governance have received particular attention, for example in relation to the provision of reliable water supplies as a catalyst for poverty eradication. Within the context of the Millennium Development Goals and against a backdrop of an increasing frequency of water crises ranging from widespread flooding to severe water scarcity, it is essential that each country and particularly those countries that face development challenges should be in a position to ensure that access to water is available to those who need it most. This issue has been highlighted by the Global Water Partnership, which stated that the water crisis facing the world is in reality a crisis of governance. The South African political environment has changed dramatically in recent years, and the central concepts of social equity and the right to a healthy environment are now entrenched in the country's Constitution. These concepts are supported by several new laws, in particular the National Environmental Management Act and the National Water Act, which in turn are based on the principles of sustainable development. However, despite the highly desirable attributes of these landmark pieces of legislation, South African authorities are still struggling to implement the requirements of these Acts almost a decade after their promulgation.
